limit or anything like that or whether she intentionally goes slow, whether she goes fast, whether she goes at the speed limit. There was none of those questions.

So it's out. There's nothing where she has actually said that that supports that the argument in the motion in limine that somehow that impacts her reasonableness because she doesn't say it anywhere. The citation you have doesn't support that provision in your opposition.

Motion in Limine Number 4, to exclude the reference to argument regarding the speed limit on Las Vegas Boulevard, Document 209, granted, for all the reasons the Court stated in the last long time.

Folks, it's 12:23, and my team has been going nonstop since about 8:15 this morning, as you saw. So we need to take a lunch break. You're welcome to come back at 1:30, and we will continue with this.

002251

See you at 1:30, folks.

Thank you so very much.

(Proceedings recessed at 12:22 p.m., until 1:30 p.m.)

THE COURT: It's 1:30. Hopefully we have everyone back and we can continue with Case Number 774286.

We are on Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 5, to exclude any argument, opinions or testimony as to the location of the vehicle in relation to the traffic signal sequence, which is Document 210.

The Court's inclination really is to deny without prejudice the motion; however, nothing in the denial would preclude, limit or otherwise modify the Court's other rulings. So to the extent that a denial would be viewed as somehow changing, the Court's prior rulings as to speed, Motions in Limine 3, 4, or anything else, that is not what its intent is.

But for the pure concept of the vehicles are in relation to the traffic signal sequence, Document 210, the Court is inclined to deny that without prejudice.

Really, the Court's inclination is based on the fact that when you have to look at the statutory provision at issue with regards to making a left-hand turn, you do have to evaluate the reasonableness, and so the reasonableness would be based on what was seen at the time by Ms. Yocum and what her understanding, if any, was as to what would be the light from the other parties. That's in no way saying that she can add to information that she did not have on the date of, but she could've learned during litigation, but to the extent that there is a proper basis and it would go from her, information, that's where the Court's inclination is.

Counsel for plaintiff, go ahead. It's your motion.

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor.

Your Honor, I think I, when I do this argument, I may enlighten you to the point where I think (video interference) you're going to reconsider your preliminary ruling.

The Court should exclude the location of the vehicles in relation to the traffic light sequence because the color in sequence of the traffic lights are irrelevant to the determination of who had the right of way under NRS 44B.253.

Not only did the Court already clearly state what the determinative factors of the collision are, as I previously discussed, Your Honor, but a clear plain reading of NRS 44B.253 also shows that the statute does not contain any language regarding traffic signals.

In Mardian versus Greenberg Family -- the Nevada Supreme Court held that when as here the statute is clear on its face the Court cannot go beyond the plain language to determine legislative intent.

Additionally, when, as here, the statute omits certain subject matter, the Court must presume that such omission was intentional.

Because NRS 44B.253 is clear on its face regarding who has the right of way, and because it's the statute omits traffic signals altogether, the Court cannot go beyond the statute's plain language, and the Court must also presume that the omission of the traffic signals was intentional.

However, Your Honor, only if the Court finds the statute is ambiguous, which the Court has already determined it's not, the Court must then determine the legislative intent by evaluating the legislative history.

As the Courts conceive from the legislative history of NRS 44B.253, which is attached as Exhibits 2 and 3 to plaintiff's motion, there's no discussion regarding the (video interference) of traffic signals in any respect, which means the Nevada Legislature clearly did not intend for color or sequence of traffic signals to be factors when determining who has the right of way. But there's no question that the traffic lights are clearly irrelevant here.

According to defendants, the traffic light color is relevant in determining who had the right of way because statutory interpretation requires Courts to consider all statutes in the same chapter together as a whole, and NRS Chapter 44 includes statutes regarding traffic light violations. But defendants conflate the determination of who had the right of way with red light violations.

Based on defendants' argument, it is clear that defendants don't understand how the statutory interpretation works.

First, the Court looks to the plain language of the statute to determine its meaning. Here the Court did that nearly two years ago when it determined that the only consideration under the statute is the location of the vehicles relative to the intersection. Defendants state that Nevada courts have a duty to construe statute as a whole so that all provisions are construed together, which is true; however, defendants' application of this rule is entirely incorrect. Nevada Court's must consider all provisions of a single statute together as a whole, not all statutes in the same chapter, as defendants contend.

Chapter 44B of the NRS contains 180 separate statutes. If the Nevada Supreme Court intended statutory interpretation to include consideration of all statutes in the same chapter, as defendant suggests, then the Nevada Supreme Court would have clearly said so, but that is not the law.

Again, the Court already noted the plain, unambiguous language of 484B.253 and the relevant factors in determining who had the right of way in its order excluding speed.

Because the statute does not have any language regarding traffic signals, the Court must presume the Nevada legislature did not intend for traffic signals to play a role in who has the right of way under the statute.

002255

One moment, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. R. EGLET: As this makes sense -- and this makes sense because we don't want drivers intending to turn left thinking regardless of how close an oncoming vehicle is to the intersection where they are going to turn left that they can just turn in front of the oncoming vehicle if the oncoming car has a red light or are close to having a red light, even if it would cause a collision.

As I previously mentioned, the only time the Court can go beyond the statute's language to determine legislative intent is if the Court finds the statute to be ambiguous, and only if the Court finds the statute is ambiguous must the Court determine the legislative intent.

But again, Your Honor, the legislative history does not discuss traffic signals. So it's clear that the Nevada legislature did not intend for traffic signals to be considered when determining who has the right of way. Therefore, the location of the vehicles in relation to the traffic signals is completely irrelevant.

Now, defendants also argue that the traffic light color and sequence goes to whether plaintiff was so close to the intersection as to constitute an immediate hazard.

Again, this argument goes back to statutory interpretation. Defendants mistakenly believe that NRS 44B.253 requires consideration of the traffic light colors. Defendants' interpretation would have the Court read words into the statute that are simply not there because the traffic light colors and sequence have nothing to do with the determination of who had the right of way under the statute and has nothing to do with whether plaintiff was so close to the intersection as to constitute an immediate hazard.

In other words, the traffic lights and the immediate hazard determination should not be conflated. Because even if there was no traffic light at the intersection, Yocum still had a duty under the law to yield to oncoming traffic.

And regardless of how harsh the outcome may be based on the plain language of the statute, U.S. Supreme Court requires that Courts give deference to the legislature's chosen words. So this Court is bound by the Supreme Court's precedent to give deference to the Nevada legislature's chosen words for NRS 44B.253, which notably do not include traffic signals.

Next, defendants argue that the traffic signals are relevant under NRS 44.253 because Yocum had the right to assume that plaintiff would obey all traffic laws, and I think this might be where you might want to rethink this, Your Honor.

Defendants then cite the RTC representative who concluded that Yocum would have seen the northbound and southbound traffic lights change in synchronized lockstep with each other. There are several issues with this argument, Your Honor.

First, this argument relies on the misrepresentation that Yocum actually saw plaintiff's motorcycle approaching the intersection, which both Yocum and this Court know she did not. Second, this argument assumes that Yocum actually knew both hers and Plaintiff's traffic lights turned in synchronized lockstep with each other, which there is absolutely no evidence that she did.

In fact, Yocum's testimony is that she used the pedestrian walkway light to determine how much time was left before the traffic light changes. So this actually dis -- proves this assumption. Specifically, Yocum testified that she looked at the pedestrian walkway light at the intersection, and she never saw it change from red to white, which would indicate that it was safe for pedestrians to walk across Las Vegas Boulevard and would also indicate that the plaintiff's traffic light had turned red.

This testimony is further evidence of the fact that Yocum had no idea that the lights changed the same -- to the same color at the same time.

Third, even if Yocum knew plaintiff's light was going to turn red at the exact same time her light turned red, on page 131 of Yocum's deposition, Yocum testified that she assumed her light was going to remain green, which means she also would have assumed plaintiff's light was going to remain green.

Even assuming, Your Honor, that Yocum knew the lights changed the same color at the same time, Yocum also testified that her light was green when she went into the intersection. It then turned yellow when she was in the intersection and that yellow was the last color she saw. So Yocum admitted under oath that she could not and did not see her light turn from yellow to red, which means there was no way for her to know plaintiff's light was going to turn red.

So even under defendants' misguided view of the facts, there's no possible way that Yocum could've reasonably assumed plaintiff was going to stop at the intersection for the red light because she didn't know the light had turned red or was even about to turn red. This means that there's no way Yocum could have taken plaintiff's traffic light color in sequence into consideration before or during her left turn, which shows the light is entirely irrelevant here.

The Court should also exclude the color and sequence of the traffic light because plaintiffs alleged red light violation is irrelevant in determining who had the right of way. Specifically, plaintiff's red light violation is the same as speed in that plaintiff's running the red -- yellow or red light was not the proximate cause of the collision.

Defendants' expert Dr. Peles concluded on several occasions that plaintiff could have stopped at his excessive speed. And as we can see in his expert reports and deposition testimony, which are Exhibits 6 through 8 of plaintiff's reply. Based on Peles's conclusion, it logically follows that plaintiff also could have stopped regardless of the traffic light color. The plaintiff's red light violation was not a proximate cause of this collision.

Likewise, the Court explained during both the hearing on plaintiff's motion in limine to exclude speed and the hearing on defendants' motion for reconsideration that speed was excluded because defendants failed to show that plaintiff's speed or Yocum's perception of plaintiff speed had any impact on Yocum's decision to turn left. That reasoning applies here because defendant cannot show that plaintiff's running the yellow or red light or Yocum's perception of plaintiff's running the yellow or red light had any impact on Yocum's decision to turn left because she didn't see her light turn red, and she assumed in fact it was not going to turn red based on her view of the pedestrian crosswalk. Therefore, there is no way plaintiff's red light violation could be a proximate cause of this collision.

According to defendants, the jury must consider plaintiff's red light violation in order to apportion fault, and then if the traffic lights are excluded, defendants will have no way to argue their defense of comparative fault.

Your Honor, the simple fact remains Yocum did not see the traffic lights turn red, which means the traffic lights had no impact whatsoever on Yocum's decision to turn left.

While the red light violation may play a role in why the parties were at a particular location, just like speed did, it is the location that the parties were at that determines who had the right of way, not the red light violation because there is no evidence that Yocum took Ethan's running of the yellow or red light into account before initiating her left turn.

Additionally, defendants' argument that they have nothing left to argue in support of their affirmative defense of comparative fault if the Court excludes the traffic light is not a legal argument and should have no impact on this Court's decision. Defendants arguing that they will have nothing left to argue is not reason enough for this Court to ignore the law in order to deny this motion or any other motions for that matter.

The Court should also exclude evidence of the traffic signal sequence because this evidence will confuse and mislead the jury into considering the traffic light sequence when the clear, plain and an ambiguous language of 44B.253 does not require consideration of such factors, as I previously mentioned.

Also, Your Honor, Nevada law does not allow the admission of evidence if the evidence will divert the jury from the real issues in the case, which is exactly what evidence of the traffic signal sequence will do because it is irrelevant determining who had the right away.

If the jury is diverted from the real issues in this case, there's no question that plaintiff will suffer extreme and unfair prejudice. Therefore, the traffic signal sequence must be excluded at the time of trial.

Now, defendants also argue that the admission of this evidence is necessary because it will help the jury assign the parties' reasonable and proper percentages of fault based on their affirmative defense of comparative negligence; however, there is no situation in which the jury could assign plaintiff a reasonable and proper percentage of fault if the jury is confused and misled in to considering irrelevant and prejudicial evidence.

Under Nevada law, defendants cannot seek introduction of irrelevant and prejudicial evidence just to gain an unfair advantage over plaintiff.

So under these circumstances, Your Honor, it is our position that the red light should be excluded, and the motion granted because she did not take the light sequencing into consideration with respect to her decision to turn left. She assumed her light was going to turn green when she pulled into the intersection, and as she's slightly -- she didn't really ever stop, but as she was rolling forward. It did turn yellow, but she never saw it turn red. She didn't think it was going to turn red, and she's looking at a pedestrian crosswalk. This would be her determination of whether it had turned red or not, and that never -- that didn't change.

So under these circumstances, it's not a factor that the defendant reasonably took into consideration as to whether to turn or not, and therefore is it's irrelevant, Your Honor, just like speed.

THE COURT: Thank you. Okay.

Who is handling it for defense?

MR. HENRIOD: Joel Henriod, Your Honor, for the defense.

First off, I'll jump to what I think ought to be the easiest part of this analysis, and that is comparative negligence.

Was it negligent of plaintiff to have entered an intersection on a red light? Of course. And when the Court looks at what is relevant for purposes of negligence and for evidence that supports one of the elements of those claims, the analysis is no different for a defendant claiming comparative negligence as for a plaintiff claiming negligence.

Here, the Court looks was it negligent for plaintiff to enter the intersection on a red light? Of course. Of course. Both statutorily negligent, as negligence per se, but just because it's what the ordinary prudent person would not do. And that's not just a but for cause. It's a proximate cause.

But for him having entered this intersection on red, he would not have broadsided the side of a bus. And it's a proximate cost. This isn't Palsgraf where the fact that he blew through a red light is somehow incidental. No. He is in the intersection and collided with this bus because he blew through that red light in the second before it happened. So it is directly relevant.

It goes to his duty. He had a statutory duty not to

002263

enter the intersection on red. And again, that duty is also informed -- or I should say the red light also informs his common-law duty of negligence because he did something that the ordinary reasonable, prudent person should not have done.

And even if we are negligent, even if he might have had the right of way had he gotten there on time, well, it doesn't alleviate him of his negligence in blowing through a red light. That's exactly how comparative negligence works. And the Court has to apportion those.

Now, it's also relevant to whether or not she breached her duty of care because who has the right of way is a shifting consideration, even within that statute. If she has the intersection when he is able to stop, then he needs to. And so the fact that he goes through -- she knows she has a green when she starts. She does see it turn yellow. All of that informs what the reasonable person would do. The reasonable, objective reasonable person would -- would start this turn if they see traffic where it is. They see oncoming traffic where it is. She knows she's towards the end of the light -- or light cycle.

Now, did she turn see it turn to red? I think that that reasonably follows from her noting that it did turn yellow because I think the ordinary reasonable person knows that in a traffic light sequence red follows yellow.

Now, I don't think somebody has to say that 002264

002264

expressly. And certainly when it is their burden to keep this out, I don't think that it is reasonable or fair for the Court to parse her deposition as saying that it's irrelevant because she didn't see it turn to red as opposed to seeing it turn to yellow and the ordinary person knows that red follows yellow.

THE COURT: Okay. Final word by counsel for plaintiff.

MR. HENRIOD: Yeah. I won't -- I won't repeat everything in our opposition, Your Honor. Unless you have questions.

THE COURT: I do not. I have the benefit of very in-depth oppositions and lots of exhibits.

002265

Go ahead, Counsel for plaintiff.

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor.

What Mr. Henriod forgets, and what I want to remind the Court is, is that the right-of-way statute is clear, and it doesn't say anything about traffic signals or speed. And why is that? Well, the reason, the obvious reason is because regardless of how fast oncoming traffic is, regardless of whether they have a stop sign or a stoplight or a yield sign, when making a left turn, you have to -- you have to make a determination as to whether you can make that left turn with the -- based on the location of the vehicle, et cetera, the speed and all of those factors.

Well, we know she didn't take the speed into consideration because she didn't see the vehicle. She saw (video interference) or different vehicles back at another light. And she didn't take the light into consideration because she never saw the light turn red. She had already started her turn. She had already started her turn before the light turned red. She still had a yellow. The light didn't turn red until she was well into her turn, Your Honor. So (video interference) act -- as.

THE COURT: You're cutting in and out.

MR. R. EGLET: -- see the light change.

THE COURT: Mr. Eglet --

MR. R. EGLET: And she never said, and there's no -- Pardon me?

THE COURT: You just were cutting in and out for a second, but now we can hear you again.

MR. R. EGLET: Okay. And she never said that she knew she was toward the end of the light's yellow sequence. She never said that.

Once again, Mr. Henriod is just filling in stuff from her testimony that's nonexistent. She never said that. She never said, well, I knew it was toward the end. What she said was the opposite. She thought she had plenty of time.

And as the Court knows, under the law, drivers can allow the light, if they're out in the intersection, in other words, past the stop line, they're making a left turn, they can allow the light to turn (video interference) --

THE COURT: You've cut out again. We cannot hear you, Mr. Eglet.

MR. R. EGLET: Right in front of me. So I'm not sure.

Can you hear me now, Your Honor?

THE COURT: I can hear you now again. Yes.

MR. R. EGLET: Okay. I'm not sure what you've missed, what you heard and what you haven't heard, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You said about the light in front of them --

MR. R. EGLET: What?

THE COURT: -- and then you cut out.

MR. R. EGLET: Yeah. My point I'm trying to make, Your Honor, is if she would have known the light was about to turn red, which she didn't, according to her own testimony, if she had seen the light turned red, this might be a little bit of a different issue, but I don't even think (video interference) under those circumstances it's an issue because the location of the vehicles is all that matters. That's all that's in the statute.

If the legislature wanted other things to be considered on the issue of the right of way, they would have put it in the statute, or even would have had something in the legislative history there, but you don't.

And so there is no evidence that she took into consideration in her decision to make her left turn the sequencing of the lights. That's the point. She didn't evaluate that and consider that. She thought the light was going to continue to remain green or yellow and that she had plenty of time left on the light because she was watching the pedestrian stoplight, and it was still red for pedestrians crossing Las Vegas Boulevard.

So it wasn't a consideration that she made. There's nothing in her testimony that said she made that consideration. And again, there's nothing in her testimony anywhere where she says that she believed the light was toward the end of the sequence.

002268

Did I just break out again?

Can you still hear me, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes. I heard you. End of the sequence.

MR. R. EGLET: So there's no evidence of that. She never said that anywhere. That's just Mr. Henriod filling that in.

So it's not something she considered, and if it's not something she considered, then it's not relevant, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do appreciate it.

All parties having a full opportunity to have not only give extensive briefing, but oral argument, here's the Court's ruling.

With regards to Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 5 to exclude any argument, opinions or testimony as to the Location of the vehicles in relation to the traffic signal sequence, the Court is to deny that without prejudice. In so doing does not modify, alter any prior rulings of the Court or any future rulings of the Court, and is not to be viewed as inconsistent with any other rulings of the Court.

The reasoning for the Court denying the motion in limine is the Court said in its inclination, and additionally it really goes to two separate factors: One, it does go to comparative negligence. It is an affirmative defense that is articulated. So knowing what really the lights were or were not or were anticipated to be or disputed to be is a factor for comparative negligence.

Independently of that, it also is a factor when you look specifically at 484B.253.

While counsel for plaintiff is correct that the lights themselves are not set forth in the statute, in order to determine for somebody for the sentence where it talks about the driver of the vehicle within an intersection intending to turn to the left shall yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is within the intersection or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard. And then it says but such driver yield, and then it tells about that.

So in order to determine whether or not something is an immediate hazard, you have to take certain things into account. Immediate hazard is not a self-defining word. You have to take into account in the eyes of the beholder what may be an immediate hazard, right. So in order to do so would have to know what the color of the particular light is.

For example, if her light was completely red, then, A, and she hadn't started going into the intersection, that could have one impact. If she's testifying that her light is green, that could have another impact. The fact that she's testifying the light was green and then went to yellow, that can have another impact. That all goes to her -- what she is doing, which also goes to the idea about whether or not she can be in the left turn, right. Because if she has already yielded whether she should be there --

I'm sorry. We've got some very weird noise going on here.

THE MARSHAL: I know. I keep going out there, and...

THE COURT: In any event, and it also would go to what the plaintiff was doing her with regards to the plaintiff whether or not it could be viewed as an immediate hazard or not. So therefore the motion is denied.

When moving on to the next one. We're moving on to Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 9, to exclude the surveillance video -- it sounds to me like it's coming from one of you all. Are you --

THE MARSHAL: I think it's coming from the doors.

THE COURT: It's a very weird --

MR. AICKLEN: It's back in there, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. No worries. I can hear it coming somewhere that way. Okay.

MR. AICKLEN: Somebody digging through the wall to get out.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, we are on the 16th floor, and they do do construction on the 17th floor.

So, Marshal, feel free. We're fine. As long as it's not a safety hazard for anyone and everyone is good, we're going to move forward.

Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 9 to exclude the surveillance video of the subject collision and to admit black and white still-frame shots with blurred lights. The Court's inclination is to deny that.

Realistically, when you all showed me that video before the Court made its ruling back in August of 2020, it's very helpful to have an understanding of what actually was viewed to be happening at that particular time. It allows the full accurate reference of what happened for that period of time. It allows parties to examine, cross-examine. It gives context to what was going on.

And in contrast, to give black-and-white still frames with blurred out lights, A, it would be inconsistent with the Court's ruling on Number 5; and B, would not fully explain the situation as going forward. And realistically, if you think about it, the Court made a very substantive ruling based on seeing that video. And so felt that that video was important in the Court making a legal ruling. And realistically, it would be important for the jury to see it when they are the triers of fact ultimately making the determinations in this case.

That's the Court's inclination.

Go ahead, Counsel for plaintiff.

MR. R. EGLET: So, Your Honor, knowing what the Court ruled on motion Number 5 and understanding where you are, I'm presuming that this one is without prejudice too.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. R. EGLET: Then I will -- I will defer arguing on this. If it comes up in trial or if I decide to renew it before trial, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

MR. R. EGLET: And I'll accept the Court's preliminary ruling at this time.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel for defense, whoever's doing that, do you wish to be heard?

MR. HENRIOD: Joel Henriod, Your Honor, for defendants.

002272

I don't have much to add, although, because I think that what the Court has articulated is correct, and I don't see any authority in the motion or the reply that would prompt any other ruling.

I guess what I'm not clear on and I'd ask for is what basis there might be to reconsider. So if it is without prejudice, I'm wondering what it is we need to be looking for that might change the analysis, and I ask because I can't imagine what that is right now.

THE COURT: Well, if one of you all would like to get me a crystal ball that works, I could answer that question, and I don't mean that the least bit sarcastically.

It's realistic. I don't know. But at this juncture, the more appropriate answer is without prejudice. A lot of things come up between the time you all do motions and when you actually have in the midst of trial; right? There can be conduct by a party that can change certain rulings of the Court. It could be found out that the video is tampered with, okay. I don't know. I'm not making hypotheticals that any of these will exist or do, or do not exist. That's the reason why I made this statement about a crystal ball. I don't have a crystal ball.

I think the appropriate thing is to do without prejudice because there's a lot of things that come up. I've done this long enough, both in private practice and being on the bench that things come up that makes more practical sense and more legally correct to do it without prejudice because you give the caveat that something could happen. And then if it does happen, you can address it at that time. Otherwise, you have a ruling of the Court.

MR. HENRIOD: Understood.

THE COURT: Do you wish to be heard any further?

MR. HENRIOD: No. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel for plaintiff, do you want any final words?

MR. R. EGLET: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. So the Court's ruling, so it was denied without prejudice for the reasons stated in its inclination.

Now, let's go to Number 6. Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 6 to exclude from trial the opinions and testimony of defendant's rebuttal expert Timothy Bussard. And now we've got multiple opinions thereon with Mr. Bussard, and so I'm going to tell you in advance a couple of -- well, wait. Hold on a second.

One of the questions the Court is going to have, and this is going to be for defendants when it is your turn, is at one point in the opposition it says you need speed in order for him to make certain opinions. And then the next part of it says but if he doesn't do speed you still get to make certain opinions. So that's really a question that the Court was kind of having on which one I should be -- and I appreciate arguments in the alternative, but realistically, can he do something without speed?

It appears that with regards to some of the potential areas of -- hold on one second. I -- that some of the things he could be -- he should be limited on because to the extent his opinion relies on speed, i.e., see Court's prior ruling.

With regards to areas that he was going to articulate that are not ultimately legal conclusions, are not, quote, recklessly, the Court disagrees with the analysis on recklessly and that other Courts have somehow allowed that interpretation coming in, then the Court might be inclined. So I really see this as a granted in part and denied in part, but I need further clarification of what defendant's position is what he can actually articulate and still be within Hallmark in light of the Court's August ruling.

But, Counsel you go first.

So plaintiff, you're first.

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor. Thank you, Your Honor.

Mr. Bussard's opinions regarding Ethan speeding must be excluded pursuant to the Court's order excluding a reference or argument regarding speed. This Court concluded in their August 2020 order excluding argument or reference to Ethan's speed that there was no evidence that speed was the proximate cause of the collision.

002275
002275

Instead, this Court concluded the determinant factors of this collision are the vehicle's location relative to the intersection pursuant to NRS 484A.210 and whether Ethan's motorcycle was in the intersection or so close thereto as to have constituted an immediate hazard pursuant to NRS 484B.253.

Yet in both Mr. Bussard's initial rebuttal report and his supplemental report, he relies on plaintiff's speed to find him at fault for the collision.

Defendants argue that even though the Court's August 2020 order excludes speed, this should not prevent Mr. Bussard from using plaintiff's speed to form his opinions.

Interestingly, defendants also argue that if Bussard, as the Court just pointed out, that if Bussard cannot use speed, his opinions will not be based on reliable methodology. And then conversely argue that Mr. Bussard's opinions do not rely entirely on speed.

Clearly speed forms the entire basis of Bussard's opinions. Because according to defendants, he is unable to formulate reliable opinions without relying on speed.

For example, in his initial report on page 13, he states, quote,

> The preventability of the subject crash is indicated by the facts in this case. The facts are that Ferree was traveling at a speed higher than the legal limit.

On page 14 through 15, he also concludes, quote,

> Whether or not Sin City provided defensive driving training would not have stopped Ferree from violating Nevada's rules of the road by traveling at a speed in excess of the legal limit.

Then on page 16, Mr. Bussard concludes, quote, There is no reason for Yocum to anticipate someone traveling at a speed that is egregious.

Then again, in his first supplemental report attached to plaintiff's motion exhibit -- attached to plaintiff's motion Exhibit 5 on page 6, he concludes that, quote, In addition to Ferree's inexperience, his driving was also careless and dangerous by violating the Nevada rules of the road, traveling at a speed in excess of the legal speed limit.

As demonstrated by the excerpts from Bussard's reports, all of Bussard's opinions rely on speed when concluding that Ethan was at fault for the collision.

Defendants also rely on Pohler v. Humboldt Motor Stages to argue that even if the Court excludes Ethan's speed, it does not mean that the Court has banned the data of speed from informing the physics calculations of the expert.

But defendants failed to recognize that Bussard did not use any physics calculations to form any of his opinions. And even if he did use physics calculations, the holding in Pohler does not apply here. In Pohler, speed was never excluded, nor was there any discussion regarding an expert's data, and expert's physics calculations or excluding experts.

In fact, experts were never even discussed in Pohler.

Pohler is also not a case about who had the right of way in an intersection when making a left turn, as we have here.

In Pohler, plaintiff and defendant collided on a two-lane highway because the defendant had veered into plaintiff's lane, and speed was introduced as the reason why defendant could not return to his lane before colliding with the plaintiff.

The Court looked at whether there was a violation of Section 530, subdivision B1, of the California Vehicle Code for driving on the left side of the road when approaching the crest of a grade or upon a curve in the highway when the driver's view is obstructed. Here there is no such issue of whether plaintiff or Yocum were driving on the opposite side of the highway traveling upon a grade or a curve in the highway or an unobstructed view. Thus the Court's holding in Pohler is simply inapplicable to the facts in this case.

Defendants then again rehash that they believe speed is relevant under 484B.253 to determine whether plaintiff was so close as to constitute an immediate hazard because one must look at, one, his location at the time the driver initiated her turn, and two, the rate at which the distance between them was likely to close based on the observable circumstances and context of the rules otherwise governing their responsive conduct. However, (video interference) failed to recognize that Yocom admitted under oath in her deposition at pages 148 through 151 that she never saw Ethan prior to initiating her turn, Your Honor.

Yocum also admitted that she failed to determine Ethan's location before initiating her left turn, and she also failed to determine the rate at which the distance between them was likely to close. Because Yocum failed to determine any of these things, speed is not relevant.

Because the Court granted plaintiff's motion in limine to exclude Dr. Peles from offering any opinions regarding Ethan's speed, the Court should similarly preclude Bussard from offering testimony or opinions as it relates related to the speed if the Court does not exclude Bussard from testifying altogether.

Bussard's opinions and testimony regarding the color of the traffic signal -- well, I'm going to skip that because --

THE COURT: You want me to be consistent in my rulings.

MR. R. EGLET: You know, you already ruled on the traffic signal color.

So Bussard should also be excluded from testifying in regard to Ethan's motorcycle driving because he has no background or experience related to motorcycles, as he is a commercial transportation expert, not a motorcycle expert.

Hallmark requires an expert's testimony be limited to matters within the scope of his specialized knowledge. Bussard's specialized knowledge is limited to commercial transportation, which is the type of vehicle that the defendant Yocum was driving. It is therefore beyond the scope of his specialized knowledge to provide opinions regarding Ethan's motorcycle driving because he lacks knowledge in the area.

Defendants argue that just because Bussard is listed as a commercial transportation specialist that doesn't mean he does not have the scientific, technical or other specialized knowledge regarding motorcycles.

Defendants also claim that Bussard's opinions are not motorcycle specific; however, as evidenced by Bussard's CV, he has no scientific, technical or specialized knowledge as it relates to motorcycles at all. This is defendant's blatant attempt to over qualify Bussard as an expert in every aspect of transportation, even though he is only a commercial transportation specialist.

There is also a clear distinction between operating a commercial vehicle and operating a motorcycle, which is precisely why the DMV has separate driving tests, handbooks and classes of licenses for motorcycle drivers and commercial drivers.

Defendants claim that Bussard's opinions are not motorcycle specific or blatantly false considering almost all of his opinions are based on Ethan speeding, driving recklessly and running a yellow or red light, all while Ethan was operating a motorcycle.

Plaintiff would not dispute Mr. Bussard's expertise and specialized knowledge as a commercial transportation specialist if he only opined as to how Yocum was driving since she was (video interference) commercial driver; however, Bussard does not even mention Yocum, one, in his supplemental report.

In Bussard's supplemental report, he only opines on Ethan's driving by copying various guidelines from the DMV motorcycle manual and concluding that Ethan failed to follow the motorcycle operating guidelines without even explaining how or why, as required under NRCP 16.1(a)(2)(B).

Bussard is clearly opining outside the scope of his specialized knowledge, and all of his opinions related to Ethan's motorcycle driving must be excluded because he has no foundation for those opinions.

Bussard should similarly be excluded from opining that Ethan was driving recklessly because he is not qualified to make those opinions. Whether Ethan was driving recklessly is a legal conclusion that Bussard is not qualified to make, as it is up to the trier of fact to decide whether Ethan was driving recklessly.

Defendants argue that Bussard's opinion that Ethan was driving recklessly is not a legal conclusion, and he should be able to opine that Ethan was driving recklessly because of his commercial transportation background; however, in Hodges v. Left Bank, LLC, Bussard was precluded from opining as to whether someone was driving recklessly because it usurped the function of the Court by determining the applicable law and communicating a legal standard to the trier of fact.

If Bussard were permitted to give opinions regarding Ethan's driving recklessly, his opinions would similarly be determining the applicable law and communicating a legal standard to the trier of fact.

Bussard's opinions related to Ethan's driving recklessly should be excluded because his opinions are improper and fail to assist the trier of fact.

Similarly, Bussard should be excluded from opining or testifying that Ethan is an inexperienced motorcycle rider because Bussard is not a motorcycle expert, and Bussard has absolutely no foundation to opine that Ethan is an inexperienced motorcycle rider, pursuant to Hallmark.

Defendants again argue that Bussard's commercial transportation background makes him qualified to testify regarding Ethan's level of experience as a motorcycle rider. Defendants rely on Rees v. Roderiques to support their arguments that Bussard can opine on Ethan's motorcycle driving experience; however, the Court in Reese only addressed an expert's standard of care.

Here Bussard's opinion that Ethan was an inexperienced motorcycle driver does not go to Ethan's standard of care as a motorcycle operator. Instead, Bussard is trying to make a factual determination about Ethan's experience. Defendants have also failed to show that Bussard has any actual knowledge or experience as it relates to motorcycles or riding a motorcycle.

His opinions regarding Ethan's experience should be excluded because opinions fall outside the scope of his expertise.

Bussard's opinions and testimony regarding the vehicle collision diagram should also be excluded because his drawings lacked foundation and will not assist the trier of fact.

lane of Las Vegas Boulevard going into the far left lane on Clark; however, as Bussard also discusses throughout his expert report, Yocum turned into the far right lane on Clark, not the far left lane, which is clearly seen in the video.

As stated in NRS 50.275, an expert witness must satisfy three elements in order to testify, including that the expert's specialized knowledge must assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or determine a fact in issue.

Bussard's diagram does the exact opposite of assisting the jury in understanding evidence and instead creates more confusion because he diagrammed Yocum's left turn incorrectly.

002284

Defendants argue that even though the diagram is incorrect, the diagram should be -- should not be excluded because it shows where the collision happened and which direction Yocum was driving for the jury.

002284

Contrary to defendants' claim, the diagram does not make clear which direction Yocum was traveling because there's no arrow or other indicator that demonstrates Yocum was traveling from Las Vegas Boulevard on to Clark. Showing the jury an incorrect diagram that will mislead the jury is much more prejudicial than probative.

Moreover, defendants can ask witnesses to describe what lane Yocum turned in or watch the video as it's readily available on the video and photos, the accurate -- where she actually turned instead of the inaccurate fabricated diagram of Mr. Bussard.

Bussard's opinions and testimony related to NRS 484B.307 must be excluded because he intentionally, intentionally misquotes the statute and misstates the meaning of the statute.

In Bussard's initial report, on pages 4 and 5, he misquotes NRS 484B.307(6) by taking Section 13(b) and replacing NRS 484B.306(b) with Section 13(b)'s language, materially altering how the statute reads.

Instead of correctly quoting NRS 484B.307(6), Bussard fraudulently creates what he wants the statute to say.

002285

Bussard conveniently took the language from NRS 484B.307(13)(b). and tried to make it seem like it was NRS 484B.307(6)(b). Any opinions and testimony should be considered irrelevant under NRS 484 -- or 48.025 because Bussard's fraudulently misrepresented the language of NRS 484B.307(6).

002285

Bussard's attempted fraud on the Court by itself warrants his exclusion as an expert witness in this case completely.

Defendants attempt to claim that the misquote was a harmless mistake, and Bussard should still be permitted to discuss the statute. Defendants also argue that NRS 484B.307 shows that Ethan was negligent, per se. However, there was no mistake in his misquote of NRS 484.307(6), because he had to deliberately cut Section 13(b) of NRS 484B.307 and paste it into the place of (6)(b) of the statute. The deliberate cut and paste is not harmless because it was presenting a blatant falsehood to the Court.

Defendants also claim that this statute shows that Ethan is negligent, per se, but nowhere in either of Bussard's reports does he opine that Ethan was negligent for violating NRS 484B.307. All Bussard does is copy and paste a fraudulently created form of the statute and state that Yocum had a valid CDL and was following safe driving guidelines.

Bussard never mentioned Ethan in this section of his report. Neither Bussard's doctored fraudulent version nor a complete reading of NRS 484B.307 demonstrates that Yocum had the right of way because right of way is not even addressed in the statute. The statute only demonstrates that if Yocum had completely entered the intersection before the light turned red, she would lawfully be able to make the left turn, even if her light turned red. The statute fails to address who would have the right of way when a vehicle is making a left turn in the path of oncoming traffic.

Bussard claims that Yocum anticipated that Ethan would not have run a yellow or red light, but Bussard forgets Yocum testified at her deposition that when she initiated her left turn she did not think the light was going to turn red any time soon.

Let me just kind of go through these notes on the light color.

THE COURT: Counsel. Counsel, I am going to have to remind you. It is now 2:20. I've got a huge -- remember, we're stopping at 4:00, okay.

MR. R. EGLET: I am very close to being done here, Your Honor, on this.

THE COURT: Because I've got to make sure I can get through all of these for you.

Go ahead, please.

MR. R. EGLET: So Bussard's opinion is related to 484B.307 must be excluded because he misquotes the statute. The statute is not relevant to determining the fault, and his opinions related to NRS 484B.307 lack foundation.

Lastly, Bussard is -- Bussard is defendant's commercial transportation expert, yet Bussard's opinions focus almost entirely on Ethan's driving. All Bussard does is repeatedly state that Yocum had a valid commercial driver's license. But just because Yocum had a valid license does not mean that she was following commercial safety guidelines as a commercial driver.

Defendants dispute that Bussard only focuses on Ethan's motorcycle riding, and they cite to areas in Bussard's report where they state he is analyzing Yocum's driving.

Defendants first cite to Bussard's opinion that the space Yocum was driving into was clear, i.e., Clark; second, defendants cite to Bussard's opinion that Yocum had enough space to clear the intersection; however, the first opinion is not relevant and not contested, and the second opinion is factually wrong.

First, whether or not Clark was clear has no relevance because it was oncoming traffic from Las Vegas Boulevard that Yocum had to determine it was an immediate hazard or not. Second, we know that Yocum did not have enough space to clear the intersection when she failed to do so.

Just because Yocum possessed a valid CDL license does not mean she was following commercial safety guidelines.

002288

Following that logic, CDL licensed drivers would never be negligent solely because they possess a valid CDL license.

002288

Bussard's conclusory opinions Yocum was a safe driver lack foundation and should be excluded.

For these reasons, plaintiff respectfully requests this Court grant plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 6 to exclude defense expert Bussard.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel for defense, who is taking this one?

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. PARKER: I am, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Go ahead, please. Feel free to sit down, stand up, podium, counsel table, whatever you like.

MS. PARKER: Good afternoon, Your Honor. I'll be brief as to this particular issue.

It can't be overstated that Mr. Bussard was designated as a rebuttal expert. The scope of his designation is to rebut the opinions of Mr. Grill and Mr. Muttart. Mr. Grill, a commercial trucking expert, and Mr. Muttart a human factors and safety expert.

His opinions set forth in his report are well within the scope of his retention as a rebuttal expert. Plaintiff takes issue with the fact that he's not a, quote, motorcycle expert. Well, that's something appropriate to deal with when we're qualifying him for an expert at trial, not at this point in time, particularly in light of the fact that he is rebutting the opinions of plaintiff's experts within the same scope and the same field.

The Court had questions regarding speed and Mr. Bussard's use of speed as the basis of his opinions. As you can see from his report -- both of his reports, Mr. Bussard looked at the totality of the evidence in this case. He did not rely solely on speed. These reports were authored prior to the Court's order excluding speed. And if we go to page 2 of his report, he cites all of the evidence in the case, all of the deposition transcript. Speed was just one factor, which has been excluded by the Court. But now we have the surveillance video. We have information with the other motorcyclists, which was a subject for a later time today.

And again, all of the deposition testimony in this case, that was all taken in consideration in formulating these opinions.

So when we go to Mr. Bussard's findings on page 16 of his report, you'll see he actually on two pages and eight conclusions mentions speed once. And that would be in point Number 1. And, frankly, it was almost a cliff note in point Number 1, or at least certainly a bullet point. It wasn't even the entirety of point Number 1.

Point Number 1 reads, Ethan Ferree's failure to follow Nevada State driving laws in regards to yielding the right of way and failing to stop at a yellow red controlled traffic signal and obeying legal posted speed limit, these failures were the cause of his own injuries.

Again, there's so much more to his opinions than just speed as being a basis for them.

I don't -- I mean, I could go through each bullet point, but I know that the Court has the report sitting in front of you and can readily see that, again, speed is not even a factor in these opinions. These opinions are meant to rebut the opinions of Mr. Grill and Mr. Muttart.

And again, also looking to the supplemental report dated June 9th -- 20th, the last page, Mr. Eglet takes issue with Mr. Bussard's opinion that Ferree was an inexperienced motorcycle rider. But again, first of all, Mr. Bussard is -- he is a driving expert, motorcycle, commercial, otherwise. He is a plethora, decades of experience in the transportation and the driving field.

But there's still so much more to his opinion: That he was driving carelessly; driving dangerously; violating Nevada's rules of the road; taking out the phrase regarding speed, because that's already been excluded, attempting to run a yellow-red controlled signal.

These are all opinions well within a rebuttal expert opinion report. They haven't been excluded by the Court by a prior order excluding speed, and I simply don't see any basis to exclude him in totality and altogether.

THE COURT: You understand the Court's question was really based on your pleadings saying,

> Put simply, just because the Court has excluded the information on plaintiff's speed itself does not mean the Court has banned the data of speed from informing the physics calculations of the expert.

That's on page 8. And then on page 7.

> Not allowing Mr. Bussard to utilize information regarding the speed of plaintiff's motorcycle to form his opinions would prevent him from giving a full picture of how the accident occurred. The fact that Mr. Bussard were to ignore the speed of plaintiff's motorcycle while forming his opinions, his opinions would not be based on reliable methodology.

That's why the Court asked the question.

MS. PARKER: I understand, Your Honor --

THE COURT: It's right there in your opposition. It says he needs speed; right?

MS. PARKER: I understand, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And then next on page 8, it says not -- okay.

Counsel for plaintiff, you get last word. Go ahead, please.

MR. R. EGLET: Clearly defense counsel has acknowledged that if he can't talk about speed or consider speed, which he clearly can't, under the Court's prior ruling, then his methodology is inadequate. It's improper, and it doesn't base -- and his methodology is improper and inadequate anyway because all he says about Yocum, and she's right, he's a rebuttal expert, he's a commercial transportation expert; he's not a driving expert in general for motorcycles and other types of vehicles.

You know, he's not an all-encompassing expert. He's a commercial transportation expert that he was designed for. He was identified to rebut Grill, not anyone else, our commercial driving -- our commercial transportation expert. And in his opinions, aside from the fact when he talks about the plaintiff, all he talks about is speed, and every one of his opinions are about the plaintiff or defendant on speed with the exception of the red light issue. I'll grant that.

But with respect to Yocum, that's where he's supposed to be giving the opinions. He's a commercial transportation expert, and he's supposed to be rebutting Grill's opinions, plaintiff's expert. All he says in every single one of his opinions, all he says is that Yocum had a valid CD -- commercial drivers license, and then he just summarily concludes, and she was driving safely and following industry standards without any analysis whatsoever, with not setting forth his basis for that opinion, just reaching that conclusionary opinion and the fact that she has a CDL license, and then jumping to the conclusion that she followed industry standards without any analysis, Your Honor.

So this is a case where under the circumstances they have admitted, acknowledged, and they are correct, that all of his opinions, the methodology for all of his opinions fail if speed -- if he can't consider speed.

MS. PARKER: Your Honor, the entirety --

MR. R. EGLET: Which he can't.

MS. PARKER: -- for plaintiff's counsel argument is what's appropriate for --

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, I think I get the last word, do I not?

THE COURT: Counsel. Counsel.

MR. R. EGLET: Or are we going to go back and forth like this all day?

THE COURT: I'm not going to do this all day, although I do think it's appropriate and fair. This Court is going to have a question because I want to make sure that counsel understood where the Court's question was when it was counsel for defendants turn to speak, right.

Have you conceded in your very brief, it sounds -- I read the sentence, right. In fact, if Mr. Bussard were to ignore the speed of plaintiff's motorcycle while forming his opinions, his opinions would not be based on reliable methodology.

I'm in no way implying, and I appreciate you put on the next page that his opinions were prior to the Court's ruling in August. I'm not saying there's any violation of the Court order, but how can I not grant their motion when your very pleading says, in fact, Mr. Bussard were to ignore the speed, plaintiff's motorcycle informing his opinions, his method would not be based on reliable methodology? It's right there on pages 7 and 8 of your pleading, right --

MS. PARKER: Your Honor --

THE COURT: And you need reliable methodology under Hallmark. I mean, that's why I was asking you the question. I was trying to do it in a more subtle indirect way to -- but maybe I have to come out and just ask it that way: How can I not grant their motion when you concede that he doesn't have methodology, and Hallmark says he has to have appropriate methodology?

MS. PARKER: Well, I don't believe that you can't grant the motion, with all due respect to the Court. That phrase was from the briefs as an alternative argument. We are by no means conceding that there is no reliable methodology.

002295

The entirety of plaintiff's motion is the topic of cross-examination. The plaintiff will have the opportunity to cross-examine him at trial as to his methodology, the basis of his opinions an additional information other than speed, which has already been excluded by the Court.

002295

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, this is a Hallmark hearing, okay. Otherwise, what's the point of these hearings, and what's the point of Hallmark?

The Court has a gatekeeping responsibility here, and that's the point, and they've conceded in their own pleadings that his methodology is fault -- is basically nonexistent if he can't use speed.

MS. PARKER: Your Honor, isn't a Hallmark hearing actually having the expert here and being able to question him as to his qualifications, his methodology, his reliability and what he was relying upon his opinions for?

THE COURT: Here's the challenge the Court has, right. Under Rule 11, you submit a pleading. You submit a pleading under Rule 11, right. If it's true and accurate and complies with all the rules and laws, right, okay. Nothing false there, right?

Your pleading does say, unless I need new reading glasses, right, line 20, between 26 and 27, in fact, if Mr. Bussard were to ignore the speed of plaintiff's motorcycle while forming his opinions, his opinions would not be based on reliable methodology, period; right? And it says after all under NRS 484B.253, whether the determination was so close constituted immediate necessarily entails the function of his location under the trial, the rate at which the distance was likely to close based on the observable, right, and then it says speed again.

But where the Court was trying to ask the question, okay, I will tell you when I read that part of the pleading, I was, okay. I was reading it in context, right, with what was above and what was below, not taking a sentence out of context, but I normally don't see a concession that it doesn't meet Hallmark.

That's -- and I wanted to hear the oral argument.

That's why, and I've kind of phrased it at the beginning what my question was going to be, right, so you people -- because you may not have been the one that drafted it, and maybe the one arguing, not the one who drafted it. I appreciate that sometimes people draft things, and people that argue things may not necessarily think things the same way, right.

So I was trying to give you a heads up of, well, this is a question the Court is going to ask, right, because if you don't have correct methodology, Hallmark tells the Court you can't have the expert, right. That's the factors it has to have methodology. It has to meet all of the Hallmark factors. And if you don't meet all the Hallmark factors, I'm not aware of any case that says if you don't meet the Hallmark factors that somehow you can still have the expert. And I have that in your brief. I don't have it -- whoever wrote it in the brief, right. I'm not going to put somebody on the spot and actually look at the name -- well, I guess (indiscernible). It's just it's right there in the brief, right, that he doesn't have accurate methodology. So --

MS. PARKER: I understand. I --

THE COURT: How does the Court deal with that and allow you to have an expert when the very counsel on behalf of the party who retained the expert says he doesn't have appropriate methodology if you can't have speed, and speed has been out of this case since August of 2020?

MS. PARKER: I understand the basis of the Court's question.

Again, the phrase in that brief was by no means meant to be any sort of concession that our rebuttal expert cannot opine without speed. I think that the rebuttal expert's reports speak to themselves regarding the totality of the evidence that he considered in formulating his opinions, and I also think that this is an issue that should be approached and dealt with at the time of trial via cross-examination, via the -- excuse me -- voir diring the expert.

THE COURT: It's not intended as a concession.

I'm hearing what you're -- was there a scrivener's error? Was that -- I mean, it says what it says. His opinions would not be based on reliable methodology without speed; right?

MS. PARKER: Your Honor, I --

THE COURT: And speed has been precluded.

I --

MS. PARKER: All I can say is, I mean, I can fall on my sword as far as that particular sentence in the brief.

THE COURT: I'm not asking people to fault -- you understand. You read in a brief where it says --

MS. PARKER: I understand.

THE COURT: -- in fact, if Mr. Bussard were to ignore the speed of plaintiff's motorcycle while forming his opinions, his opinions would not be based on reliable methodology. It doesn't say a particular opinion, right. It doesn't say --

002298

MS. PARKER: I understand, Your Honor, but again, I still think that Mr. Bussard's reports speak for themselves. There is a totality of what he looked at in formulating his opinions. That is one sentence in a 20-page brief that explained the various -- the reasons why it is his opinions are admissible and why again his qualification and methodology, reliability and everything is the subject for cross-examination, voir diring an expert at the time of trial as opposed to summarily excluding him in a motion hearing.

MR. AICKLEN: And as Your Honor pointed out, if I can just pop up real quick.

002299

MR. R. EGLET: Whoa. Whoa. Whoa. How many lawyers --

MR. AICKLEN: As Your Honor pointed out, Your Honor --

MR. R. EGLET: -- are they going to have speaking on the other side, Your Honor? Come on. Come on.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Eglet. The reason why I'm going to allow it, in fairness, you've had your associate speak on one of them. So I'm going to give just as you get two minutes.

MR. AICKLEN: He also did review the video and opine on that as well. And as you said, that is very helpful. So it's not just the speed calculations, as she said. There's a ton of evidence in there, including the video representation. Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. Here's what I'm going to do. We are going to voir dire Mr. Bussard outside the presence of the jury. Because the reason why the Court is going to find that's appropriate is for three separate reasons.

One, while that sentence says what it says, I have the author of the sentence saying it was not intended by its plain English, and I appreciate sometimes people don't necessarily choose their correct wording.

Two, do have a section that says they're not completely reliant on speed on a further on in the brief, and so the Court could view that as alternative argument.

And really, third, he is a rebuttal.

So if I do him at the time of trial outside the presence of the jury, at that juncture I'll even know whether or not plaintiff's counsel has even decided to utilize their expert to see if Mr.-- and the scope of their expert's testimony to see if Bussard is even going to, A, be needed because, since he's a rebuttal, he would only come if the initial expert testifies; and B, he'd be limited to the scope of his rebuttal based on what the initial expert testifies, and so that would allow to do the Hallmark hearing, and hear from his mouth whether his multiple references to speed in his report somehow are different, and because I do have to take into consideration his reports were done in early 2020, but there never was a request to the Court to do a supplemental report in light of the Court's ruling.

I mean, you all have extended discovery. You extended motions in limine. You extended all sorts of things, and nobody asked me that. So I'm not sure why, but then you also have the fact that he's the only rebuttal expert that addresses this particular concept, and so to preclude him without an evidentiary hearing, I don't think is the more prudent choice. I think the more prudent choice is what the Court's going to do, which is we are going to voir dire him outside the presence of the jury, and then, as I just stated, for the various reasons I just stated.

So for purposes of the motion, the motion has to be deferred until after the voir dire of Mr. Bussard at the time of trial outside the presence of the jury. Once we find out whether he's even going to need to testify depending on if plaintiff does their initial expert.

I'm going on now to Motion in Limine Number 7 to Exclude Police Officers' Statements Contained in Their Body Camera Footage and Testimony Regarding Fault, Document 212. The Court is inclined to grant that because ultimate fault issue really is an issue for the jury as is the comparative negligence. That's the Court's quick inclination.

Counsel for plaintiff, it's your motion.

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor.

So, Your Honor, hearsay is an out-of-court statement offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted unless being made by a witness while testifying at the trial or hearing.

Pursuant to NRS 51.065, hearsay is inadmissible unless it falls within a hearsay exception. Any statement given by a witness to a police officer is itself hearsay and must itself be independently admissible under a separate and distinct exception to the hearsay rule.

The business records exception does not itself permit a party to introduce into evidence the actual contents of an out-of-court statement given to police by a witness concerning the event itself.

While body cam -- camera footage itself is not hearsay, any oral or nonverbal assertions contained in the footage that are offered for the truth of the matter asserted must fall under a hearsay exception in order to be admitted into evidence. In the United States v. Groah, the Court excluded a police officer's statements on body camera video based on hearsay grounds.

Defendants contend that plaintiff is trying to skew the balance of evidence by excluding the body camera footage before trial and argue that the Court should wait until trial to rule on its admissibility. However, plaintiff is not trying to skew the evidence. Instead, plaintiff is trying to narrow the issues for trial, which is entirely proper under EDRC [sic] 2.67.

Pursuant to NRCP 16(c)(2)(C), the (video interference) maintains the authority to rule on motions in limine by allowing advance rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Trial courts also have broad discretion in determining whether to admit evidence and may exclude relevant evidence that is substantially more prejudicial than probative leaving resolvable issues like the admissibility of evidence until trial increases the likelihood of a mistrial.

While plaintiff can object to defendants different proffers of evidence, plaintiff cannot erase what the jury has already heard. The Court has the authority to determine the admissibility of the evidence now, and plaintiff respectfully asks the Court to exclude the police body camera footage and any testimony regarding fault.

Plaintiff also anticipates that the police officer's statements contained in the body camera video footage will be offered to prove that Ethan was a reckless driver who caused the accident. For example, in body camera footage, officers can be heard discussing that the collision was most likely a 410, which is the code for reckless driving; however, these officers did not witness the collision.

Also, Sergeant Fletcher, who was one of the first

Metro police officers on the scene, testified that it is ultimately up to the fatal detective to work up -- to do the work up and to determine whether there was a reckless driving involved.

Sergeant Fletcher and other officers only learned of what allegedly occurred through percipient witnesses and from other officers who also did not witness the collision, leading to double and triple hearsay. And there is no question that the opinion that Ethan was driving recklessly would be offered for the truth of the matter asserted.

Defendants next claim that it is gross -- claim that it is grossly unfair to exclude all officers' statements and their body camera footage; however, defendants failed to point to any hearsay exception that the videos would fall under and failed to argue why the video should not be excluded. All defendants do is cite to various NRS chapters that discuss hearsay exceptions and generally state that the list includes witness unavailability at trial.

If defendants contend that body camera footage falls under a hearsay exception, the defense must reference which specific hearsay exception applies and explain how it applies. Simply stating that the list of hearsay exceptions includes exceptions for unavailable witnesses demonstrates nothing because even if the Court deems a witness unavailable, then defendants still have to show that the unavailable witness's statements fall under one of the hearsay exceptions. It is not grossly unfair to properly exclude inadmissible evidence, as defendants claim, considering they fall -- failed to argue how any part of the body camera footage falls under a hearsay exception.

Likewise, the officers who arrived at the scene of the collision must only be permitted to testify about the facts that they observed. All of the officers arrived at the scene after the collision and do not have any personal knowledge regarding what occurred.

In Lord v. State, the Nevada Supreme Court held that pursuant to NRS 50.275, when the cause of an accident is not immediately apparent, the opinion as to the cause should be given by one qualified as an expert, not by a law enforcement officer. Under NRS 50.25 (video interference) lay witness testimony in the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences which are one, rationally based on the perception of the witness and; two, helpful to a clear understanding of the testimony of the witness or to the determination of a fact at issue.

Additionally, in Frias, the Supreme Court held that it was a reversible error to admit into evidence a traffic accident report because it contained statements of third parties, the police officers conclusions as to the cause of the accident, and it references the insurance in issuance of traffic citations.

The Court also held that the investigating officer was not qualified to testify regarding fault for an accident because it is the function of the trier of fact to decide who and what caused the accident.

The officers that arrived at the scene are all lay witnesses, and their statements and conclusions regarding Ethan driving recklessly or who was at fault must be excluded because none of these officers witnessed the collusion, and their conclusions on their body camera footage that Ethan was driving recklessly are solely based on statements of third parties and a cursory investigation of the scene, which would not give them the proper foundation under NRS 50.265 or 50.275.

Defendants rely on Duran v. Mueller, to argue that the police officer should be allowed to testify regarding their opinions if those opinions are based on relatively detailed percipient observations of physical evidence at the accident scene.

Defendants specifically cite to Metro Detective Baker as someone who they believe should be allowed to provide opinions that he made in his traffic accident report, like Ethan ran the red light. But defendants overstate the holding in Duran. The police officer -- in Duran, the police officer was allowed to testify regarding the position of the cars as they came together because he had already testified about the skid marks, point of impact, the apparent directions of the vehicles and the damage to the vehicles.

Defendants want this Court to expand the holding in Duran and allow police officers to testify to fault even though the court in Duran specifically held that the police officer was not allowed to testify to fault. Therefore any police officer's opinions regarding fault, including Detective Baker's opinions must be excluded.

While defendant -- while Detective Baker went to the scene of the collision, investigated the collision and prepared a report, he still must be excluded from testifying to fault based on the holdings in Duran and Frias. Detective Baker's opinions in his report are all based on statements from third parties and a cursory investigation of the scene.

Defendants also argue that defendant (sic) Baker should be permitted to testify that Ethan ran the red light; however, defendant Baker is also a lay witness. As a lay witness Detective Baker's opinion must be based on his perceptions pursuant to NRS 50.265, and he didn't arrive at the scene until after the collision occurred. So he did not witness the accident, and he based his report -- bases his report on video surveillance footage, which is not proper. He's not an expert.

Detective Baker saw the skid marks Ethan's motorcycle left behind and the subsequent positions of the vehicles after he arrived at the scene.

While plaintiff believes that the color of the lights when Ethan was traveling through them is irrelevant, the fact that even if the Court doesn't deem that fact -- or deems that fact relevant, which you have, Detective Baker is still not qualified as a lay witness to give opinions regarding fault.

Pursuant to NRS 50.275, opinions regarding cause should only be given by one qualified as an expert, not by a law enforcement officer.

While Detective Baker prepared a report as an investigating officer who went to the scene of the collision, he is still a lay witness and not permitted to provide opinions regarding fault, Your Honor.

002308

Because Detective Baker did not arrive at the scene until after the collision occurred, he cannot testify as to what he -- he can only testify as to what he perceived on his arrival. Any other opinions would be an improper lay opinion, and an improper opinion under the holdings in Duran v. Frias (as said).

002308

While the police officer or camera footage should be excluded for the reasons already stated, the footage contained statements from Bloomfield's accusing Ethan's riding companions of running a red light at Fremont and Las Vegas Boulevard must also be excluded because his statements are irrelevant, as they are not related to what occurred at the time at the intersection of Clark and Las Vegas Boulevard, and they are substantially more prejudicial than prejudice [sic].

Defendants argue that they may want to use the body camera footage of Bloomfield to refresh his memory or to use it if he testifies inconsistently -- inconsistently with what he said previously; however, Bloomfield's sworn depo in which he provided significantly more details regarding what he claims he witnessed can easily be used.

While plaintiff believes that Bloomfield's testimony is irrelevant and lacks foundation, and the Court has already ruled upon that, the body camera footage of Bloomfield should therefore be excluded as well.

002309

Additionally, most of the officers seen and heard on the body camera footage were there for traffic control purposes and to preserve the scene for the fatal team to arrive. The officers in the body camera footage were speculating as to what cause occurred based on taking -- talking to percipient witnesses and looking at where Ethan's motorcycle was located after the crash. So this must be excluded under Frias.

002309

Defendants argue that they may want to use body camera footage if a police officer testifies inconsistently with the body camera footage; however, defendants failed to point to any specific portion of the video which they believe could be used to confront officers.

More importantly, defendants could use -- could not use the body camera footage to confront officers because the officers' statements are entirely based on speculation.

Therefore, defendants would be unable to confront any police officers because the statements on the body camera footage only include improper lay opinions, Your Honor.

For these reasons, plaintiff respectfully requests the Court grant Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 7 to exclude police officers' statements contained in their body camera footage and testimony regarding fault.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel, feel free to respond.

MR. BRAGONJE: Thank you, Your Honor. Just a few quick points here. Ultimately I think I would ask the Court to defer this ruling to the time of trial.

Three quick points here. I think the goalposts are shifting a little bit here. There are about 16 body camera footages. None of these are attached to the motion or the reply, and I think to say they're all categorically out is just not true.

What was attached to the motion and the reply was just a deposition transcript, and a transcript of the meet and confer that preceded these hearings.

As I say, there's about three -- excuse me, about 16 or 17 of these different body camera footages, and they ought to come in because they're substantive evidence on their own,

002310

that there's probably --

THE COURT: But did you provide them to me in your opposition? Neither side.

MR. BRAGONJE: No.

THE COURT: I mean, realistically --

MR. BRAGONJE: No. And that's why --

THE COURT: I have to take from what you all provided me --

MR. BRAGONJE: I agree.

THE COURT: -- right? Don't I?

MR. BRAGONJE: And I agree.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. BRAGONJE: And I think to categorically exclude surveillance video, the Court has to look at it first, and that's why I think this motion is premature.

THE COURT: I will tell you where the Court -- I definitely want to let you finish. Body cam footage by its nature includes communications between individuals, which are out-of-court statements.

MR. BRAGONJE: Sure.

THE COURT: Okay. So the Court, when it was reviewing this motion, looked, particularly to the opposition, to see was their exceptions cited to the hearsay rule, right.

MR. BRAGONJE: Correct.

THE COURT: What -- I didn't see it. I didn't see 002311

002311 that, well, this one, you know --

MR. BRAGONJE: Yeah. Sorry.

THE COURT: And I appreciate your (indiscernible) may go to our initial burdens, okay. And that's why I was balancing.

But go ahead.

MR. BRAGONJE: Yeah. I was going to say we're going to initial burdens here. How can we -- how can we say, you know, this is what we would -- this is the exception we would argue for when we're not presented with the specific body camera footage that's in question. We've got deposition testimony. We've got a transcript from a meet and confer, but we don't actually have the footage that asked to be excluded.

Now, let me say two things about hearsay. Some of these statements are not hearsay. For example, you know that it is a bitterly contested issue in this case about what the defendant bus driver, Ms. Yocum, saw and didn't saw, and there is an on scene, right after the collision interview with Ms. Yocum, and that would come in to rebut the charge of recent fabrication.

We're hearing that oh, she's changed her story. She said one thing at the deposition. Then she had an affidavit that was different. Why not let the jury look at something that isn't hearsay, which is her statements to the officer right after the accident? So I don't think it's all categorically hearsay anyway.

And then in terms of other hearsay exceptions, I mean, excited utterance is going to cover a lot of these things. These are interviews that were happening at the scene of an accident where someone could have died, and people were under the influence of the event that would allow something to come in under the excited utterance exception to the hearsay rule.

So I don't think it's all hearsay. And if it is, there may be exceptions. And to evaluate that, we've got to have the exact footage in front of us. So I think -- I think ultimately we'd ask the Court to defer ruling on these issues.

Now, I should add we don't disagree that some statements might be beyond what is appropriate for an officer to say. An officer can't opine as to negligence or culpability, and maybe some of those statements need to come out, but I think why don't we wait until trial and see if those are even going to be offered in the first place. I just think this is premature when we don't have the videos in question.

THE COURT: Aren't they already on your witness, slash, exhibit list?

MR. BRAGONJE: No.

THE COURT: I mean witness for --

MR. BRAGONJE: I'm confident they are. I don't know for sure. I'm confident they are, but I think that's a different burden and a different paper and a different pleading than a motion in limine. I mean, we had extensive argument this morning about, you know, things that need to be in the motion so the Court can rule on them. They're not attached or offered. You know, we can watch them live now, but that's not happening either. I think it's premature to say 16 videos aren't coming out. They are substantive evidence. Even if we silenced them all and had none of the dialogue, they come in as substantive evidence.

And you've got to think about from the jury's point of view, there's not going to be a site visit. So we've got the surveillance video that's several hundred feet in the distance.

THE COURT: Oh, do you want me to reconsider that ruling?

MR. BRAGONJE: No. No. I am saying parent -- pair it with a close-up, which is these body cam.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BRAGONJE: It's substantive. Substantive.

THE COURT: I asked you a question. So feel free to proceed with the end of your argument.

MR. BRAGONJE: I don't have any more unless you have.

THE COURT: I do not.

Okay. Thank you.

Counsel for plaintiff, how about the issue that -- 002314

002314
002314

MR. R. EGLET: All right. So, Your Honor, I guess -- I'm sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: How about the issue that I have --

MR. R. EGLET: I'm sorry. I --

THE COURT: I haven't seen them.

MR. R. EGLET: I understand, Your Honor, but that's not the point. The point is they're hearsay. It's clearly hearsay. That's the basis of our motion. It is the opposing parties' obligation to cite what the hearsay exceptions are and to identify what they are and where that occurred. It is their duty and their burden to go through these body cams and say, okay, Your Honor, in their opposing papers, here's -- or today here in oral argument, here's what was said. Here's the exception to that. Here's a hearsay exception.

They didn't do any of that. They just want you to defer everything for trial. We have trial in what, a month and a half, Your Honor? We have to prepare for this trial. This is a big trial. The reason for motions in limine like this are to ferret or to narrow the issues for trial so we know what we have to prepare for.

So we shouldn't have to be preparing for potential cross examinations of a bunch of police officers regarding hearsay on video cam. Your Honor, it's not appropriate. We filed the motion based on hearsay. It's clearly hearsay. It's all out of -- statements, and it's not an excited utterance,

Your Honor. An excited utterance is contemporaneous with the event or immediately thereafter, not, you know, some time later when the police are mulling around and have the scene blocked off and are talking to each other. That is not an excited utterance, Your Honor.

It is not an exception to the hearsay rule, and they don't even point out what is the excited utterance they're claiming was there? It is their obligation to do that. They failed to do that in their opposition. This motion should be granted.

THE COURT: Okay. Here's what the Court's going to do.

Counsel for defense, has got a good base. Realistically, it's the initial burden of the movant to establish if evidence has to be excluded. In the absence of having nary -- any copy of the evidence, by whatever means, in this case it would be body cam video, realistically, as a global concept, you all disagree as to what is on the video. So whether it would or would not go to any hearsay exceptions, defense would have to have first the initial whether it means all videos that are from the police officers or only some of them, et cetera.

Realistically, I think the better position here is I do not have the information that is necessary in order for this Court to rule to exclude evidence when I have not seen the evidence that is being requested to be excluded.

Realistically --

MR. R. EGLET: But you're --

THE COURT: -- folks, for how much effort you all have put into this case, I mean, come on. You know what would end up happening, right. That would be an automatic issue, made a ruling without even seeing the evidence. That's not going to happen. I need to see the evidence --

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor --

THE COURT: -- in order to make a ruling. So it does need to get deferred.

As far as your timing of trial, I can jump into that now, or I can move forward with your motions in limine. I will tell you my two-second version is yes, you are on my June 27th five-week stack. I have a 2015 business court case that is going to take, under the rules, it takes precedence. I have to do that case. That case is two to three weeks, anticipated to be three weeks.

So the chance of you all going, other than possibly at the very end of my stack is not going to happen because, under the rules, as a business court Judge, I need to take that business court case -- well, not only for age because it's 2015, got transferred to me, but mainly because it's a business court case.

So we can talk about where there's time to put you in. I can do it now. I can do it at the end of your motions. We've got about an hour left because I have to -- 4:00 o'clock is when we said we have to cut off. We've got people with obligations.

So for today's purposes, for this particular motion, it does have to be deferred because the Court has not seen the various surveillance video which is at issue, and so, unlike Number 9, Number 9 I'd already seen the surveillance video. You all had shown it to me.

MR. BRAGONJE: Yeah, and we provided --

THE COURT: -- multiple times.

MR. BRAGONJE: -- again today if we needed to.

MR. R. EGLET: But, Judge, there's no question that it's hearsay. I mean, the Court already acknowledged that. Everything on that is body cameras are hearsay. They have to be hearsay.

THE COURT: But --

MR. R. EGLET: And that was our objection is it is the defense's responsibility to point out what the hearsay exceptions are for what they want in. It's not our responsibility to go through every single statement that's made in the video and then explain to the Court why there is not a hearsay objection. In court it works the same way. If I stand up.

THE COURT: Counsel. Counsel. Counsel.

002318
002318

MR. R. EGLET: If a witness is about to say something.

THE COURT: I'm going to stop you because the Court is not changing the burden. The Court is saying it needs to see and hear the evidence, right, okay. So that --

MR. R. EGLET: Okay. Then we can get you the --

THE COURT: -- I have some concept, right.

MR. R. EGLET: We can get you the video clips. We can get you the body cams.

THE COURT: I mean I think that's the fair --

MR. R. EGLET: I mean, if the Court wants to spend its time watching all those body cams, it seems to me that the burden is on the defense to come forward with what in the body cams they want to play and what are the hearsay exceptions. It's not the Court's responsibility or our responsibility to ferret out what exactly they want.

THE COURT: But, Counsel --

MR. R. EGLET: To us it's all hearsay.

THE COURT: But, Counsel, you're the movant on a motion, right.

MR. R. EGLET: Right.

THE COURT: And the movant on a motion has to have the initial burden to show that it's entitled to exclude or include the evidence, right, on a motion in limine before it goes over to defendants to have to respond and then to say what is --

MR. R. EGLET: Right.

THE COURT: -- if they're going to say it was a hearsay exceptions.

Realistically --

MR. R. EGLET: I agree.

THE COURT: -- as you know, there is case law that says you've got to look at some videos, right, before doing it. I don't think you all want to risk this case on something as simple as guess what, it takes me more time to watch video. I'm more than glad to do it. It's part of my job, okay. It was --

MR. R. EGLET: I agree that -- I agree that the plaintiff has the initial burden on a hearsay objection, Your Honor, but all the plaintiff has to say is (video interference) then shifts to the defense to provide an exception to the hearsay. We have done that here.

THE COURT: Well, I think -- I'm hearing what everybody is saying, but without even listening to it, the fact that I could evaluate whether there is any potential exceptions to evaluate whether it is the direct or inconsistent testimony or whether there -- I have to hear it. I have to see it. It's the same thing --

MR. R. EGLET: All right. We'll get you the video camera clips by the end of this week, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And we're just going to have to find some time to get that done, and I appreciate that. So we'll get it done so we can get this taken care of for you.

Okay. So put that on your to-do list so that I have defer this one.

Okay. Let's move on to the next one. Let's see what else we can get taken care of.

The next one is plaintiff's motion in limine --

MR. R. EGLET: Well --

THE COURT: -- 8, to exclude the argument of plaintiff's counsel engaged in unethical deposition tactics, Document 215.

002321

I'm granting that. Folks come on. You are way too experienced to think that -- I mean, that's granted as to everyone. You all don't say in front of a jury what people's perception is. You focus on the facts. You don't go at home and attacks on each other. And I'm sure everyone was planning on doing that anyway, but since you need an order of the Court since there seem to be not on a meet and confer, I'm going to make it clear no one is going in front of this jury and attacking counsel, either side. I'm not saying anyone would, I'm just making sure you don't.

002321

Who's taking the --

MR. AICKLEN: Your Honor, these events occurred before we came into the case. But on my behalf and the defense counsel, and I've known Mr. Eglet for over 20 years and worked with Danielle Miller for about 10, nobody is going to call anyone else unethical in the courtroom.

THE COURT: Then why do I even have this? Why did you even not agree to the motion in limine? Why am I even hearing it?

MR. AICKLEN: I don't know why. Like I said, I wasn't involved.

THE COURT: Whoever did this meet and confer, I mean, seriously, folks. I mean, do you want to talk about law school 101.

MR. R. EGLET: Well, it's not just for --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, the issue is not just -- the issue is not just referring to counsel as unethical. It's implying that counsel did something unethical if counsel or the witness gets up and says, well, they were asking questions that were tricky. They were trying to confuse me, and all the nonsense we've pointed out in the brief. That is a -- that is an accusation that opposing counsel is not acting with honor and honesty and is, to a certain extent is being unethical.

So it's not just -- I don't expect Mr. Aicklen or anybody on the other side to blatantly call me unethical, and obviously it wasn't me that they were referring to anyway. I didn't take the deposition, but that is improper. I mean, we laid out of why, you know, she didn't change her dep -- she had every opportunity to change her deposition testimony. She didn't do so.

THE COURT: So you all have --

MR. R. EGLET: They can't come back and try to say, oh, you twisted me. You twisted me around.

THE COURT: Let's be clear. And the Court in its inclination is in no way saying that a witness couldn't say that maybe she didn't understand a question if that's an accurate statement, okay, but cannot say that somebody did something --

MR. R. EGLET: That's fine.

THE COURT: -- to her or him, right, and that that was -- you know, they can be nervous. It could be a first the deposition, whatever, if it's a factual statement that's coming from the witness if it's accurate, and the Court is not precluding something like that, but the Court is going to preclude, which, like I said, I was surprised this one was not agreed upon, and it's mutual to everyone because -- you guys -- I've had trials with almost every one of you or your firms. You're not going to go there.

I mean, first off, I'm not going to allow it -- first off, you wouldn't do it professionally. Second off, I'm not going to allow it, in no particular order. And third off, you know, the client is not going to pay for an appeal on doing per se violations right, of ethical rules and things.

So, but getting to the nuts and bolts of it is the Court's inclination is to, to the extent that the motion is not moot or mutually agreed upon, then the Court is granting it, and the Court's granting of it includes people stating, and witnesses would be need to be notified, and I'm sure you all do this anyway as part of your custom and practice, that they're not going to say mean and nasty, inappropriate things about the counsel.

Now, if they didn't understand a question, right, or they have a language issue or whatever reason from their own bases, if that is a true and accurate statement, okay, if someone doesn't come up with a language issue, who didn't have one the day before, right, the trial started, but that Court's ruling is not precluding things like that. It's any type of attacks for implying that people did things unethical, twisted, et cetera. That doesn't impact anyone's ability to represent your clients vigorously in accordance with the rules of professional conduct.

Counsel for plaintiff, it's your motion. Is there anything else that needs to be said, or does that meet your needs?

MR. R. EGLET: That meets our needs, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel for defense, is there anything else that needs to be said, or does that meet everybody's needs.

002324
002324
002324

ATTORNEYS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Be the professionals you are, right.

MR. BRAGONJE: You can count on it. Yeah. Thank you.

THE COURT: I assume I can. You guys have enough focus on the difference in the facts and law. You don't need to go there.

Okay. Made the ruling on 8.

10, to exclude the reference, arguments of conduct of other motorcyclists with whom plaintiff rode, which is document 217, the opposition, et cetera, thereto.

002325

The Court's inclination on this one really is granting in part and denying in part. And I'm going to need a clarification from plaintiff's counsel on really what is the scope here.

002325

Because to the extent the scope is that another motorcyclist ran a red light, engaged in reckless behavior, all that would be granted because that would be not relevant to this plaintiff's case; however, to the extent that the motion is trying to say not even to acknowledge that there were three other, four other -- sometimes you all say three, and sometimes you say four, motorcyclists, right, who were riding with the plaintiff, it would be denied without prejudice because you have to have a true and accurate concept of whether or not there was a single motorist -- motorcyclist versus more than one motorcyclist. Of course, no one is going to start getting into street racing.

So, Counsel for plaintiff, in your response, can you just kind of give a quick clarification on the scope of what you're going for, please.

MR. R. EGLET: Yeah. Yes, Your Honor. We're not talking about exclusion about what these motorcycle -- the other three motorcyclists were doing that night as they were riding down with Ethan as they approached the intersection. I mean, obviously you've already ruled, you know, that Bloomfield can't say they ran the red light at Las Vegas -- Las Vegas Boulevard and Fremont, but, no, we're talking about in this motion is testimony that came out in my client's deposition about his riding with other people other than these -- this motion is about other motorcycle riders, not the three he was with that night, at other times when he was riding with them and his observations were he said what they were doing.

So that -- no, the scope is limited to that, not -- not what happened that night with these three motorcyclists, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you for that clarification.

MR. R. EGLET: To answer your question.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. R. EGLET: And, Your Honor, if I could, and I think this will save some time, I'd like to handle our Motion in Limine Number 10 and 11 together. They responded in their opposition to both of them together.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. R. EGLET: And they're kind of interrelated. So I think it makes sense to hear both.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. R. EGLET: If that's okay with the Court.

THE COURT: Yeah. They did an omnibus 246. Go ahead.

MR. R. EGLET: All right. So thank you, Your Honor.

So in Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 10, plaintiff asked the Court to exclude any reference or argument to the conduct of other motorcyclists, not the ones that night with whom Ethan rode on other occasions, given Ethan's testimony that some of the motorcycles he rode with sped or drove recklessly; however, the conduct of those motorcyclists is irrelevant, as it has no tendency to make the existence of a fact more or less probable.

In response, defendants argue that this is evidence of a prior bad act or evidence of habit.

Defendants also argue that they should be permitted to use Ethan's description of the conduct of these other motorcycle riders he rode with at some unknown time as impeachment evidence against Ethan Ferree. However, the conduct of other motorcyclists that Ethan, who it would not inherently mean that Ethan imitated that conduct (video interference) also no evidence that (video interference) sped or rode recklessly, like the motion (video interference) referred to during his deposition, nor is there any admissible evidence that Ethan sped or rode recklessly at the time of the collision.

The undue prejudice of allowing any reference or argument to other motorcyclists' conduct unrelated to this event clearly outweighs the probative value of admitting this evidence.

Defendants also failed to state how this testimony (video interference) admissible to impeach Ethan (video interference) pursuant to NRS 15.75; however, NRS (video interference) limit (video interference) impeachment evidence may be used. Those limitations would not allow defendants to use testimony referencing the conduct of other motorcyclists against Ethan. (Video interference) allow to use Ethan's prior speeding as impeachment evidence.

NRS (video interference) talking about there is he was asked in his deposition (video interference). I think he -- (indiscernible) explained it wasn't on a freeway. It wasn't --

MR. AICKLEN: I can't understand him.

MR. R. EGLET: -- way out in some deserted road

002328
002328

somewhere or something.

THE COURT: Mr. Eglet, you're cutting in and out. You started -- you cut in and out. You said -- after you said impeach Ethan, and then you said on the highway, and some words got cut off. Before on the highway and after the Highway --

MR. R. EGLET: Yeah. So the defendants --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. R. EGLET: So defendants are -- they're not allowed to use Ethan's prior alleged speeding that I was just speaking about where he said -- he admitted in his deposition on a different occasion at some unknown time on some deserted country road he got his motorcycle up to 80 or 85 miles an hour. You know, that is a prior at bad act I guess you can say, and so it has nothing to do -- no indication of what occurred here. And it's just -- to bring that in would just be again a back door effort to try to imply to the jury that he was speeding on the night of the accident.

And NRS 50.853, which addresses character evidence states that specific instances of the conduct of a witness for the purposes of attacking the witness's credibility other than conviction of a crime may not be provided by extrinsic evidence. They may, however, be, if relevant to truthfulness, be inquired to on cross-examination of the witness.

Evidence that Ethan sometimes rode with other motorcyclists who sped is intrinsic -- extrinsic evidence that would not be admissible under NRS 50.0853.

002329
002329

The evidence is also not relevant to truthfulness. Ethan testified that he thought some of the motorcyclists he rode with sped and drove recklessly, but he never stated that all of them did or that he sped or rode recklessly with them.

Additionally, Ethan's prior speeding is also collateral because the determinative factors in the collision are the location of the vehicles relative to the intersection of Clark Avenue and Las Vegas Boulevard pursuant to the right-of-way statute and whether Ethan's motorcycle was in the intersection or close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard. This Court already concluded that speed was not the proximate cause of the collision.

Similarly, this Court should exclude any evidence related to Ethan's prior speeding or speeding by anyone else he rode with on prior occasions because it is not relevant and is substantially more prejudicial than probative.

With respect to Number 11, Your Honor, plaintiff asked the Court to exclude reference to Ethan's prior motorcycle riding, and this is where I was talking about in Ethan's depo he was asked what was the fastest he had ever gone, and I think he said something like 80 or 85 miles an hour on this country road. And this should be excluded as well because it's irrelevant, as it will have no tendency to make any fact more probable in this case, and this evidence is also substantially more prejudicial than probative.

Defendants make it clear in their opposition that they want to refer to Ethan's prior conduct of riding his motorcycle at an excessive speed to show that Ethan was at fault for the collision because he was excessively speeding, which has been excluded.

Also because defendants claim that plaintiff is asking the Court to take judicial notice that Ethan is a novice driver, defendants want to use Ethan's prior speeding impeachment -- speeding to impeach Ethan to show that Ethan is not a novice motorcycle rider.

We withdrew that motion, Your Honor. So that's not even a pending motion before the Court.

Presenting evidence that Ethan previously sped on his motorcycle does not demonstrate one way or the other the extent of Ethan's motorcycle skills and experience, and allowing defendants to admit evidence or testimony of Ethan's prior speeding is improper character evidence considering defendants want to use it to show that because he was speeding on a prior occasion he was likely also speeding when the collision occurred.

Given this Court's order granting plaintiff's motion in limine to exclude argument or reference to Ethan's speed, Ethan's motorcycle riding a few intersections prior -- okay. That's a different issue.

002331
002331

So at any rate, Your Honor, that as well as a prior bad act and should not be admitted, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel --

MR. R. EGLET: And that's basically what 11 is.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. R. EGLET: Eleven is just about -- Number 10 is about his driving with these other motorcyclists where he said they made him nervous because they seemed to speed and drive recklessly.

Number 11 is just specifically about this one incident where he testified that he went 80 or 85 miles an hour out on a country road and some other occasion. And so that would be a prior bad act.

002332

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel for defense, would you like to respond?

MS. PARKER: Yes, Your Honor. Just very briefly.

If I may lead the Court to NRS 48.045, that evidence of other wrongs or acts, and I'm paraphrasing, is admissible for proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation and plan, knowledge, identity or the absence of mistake or absence -- or accident.

Here we have a plaintiff who testified and is going to say he doesn't remember what happened at all. We have three gentlemen that were riding with him that weren't forthcoming, nor truthful in their depositions. So I believe this evidence of plaintiff's pattern of how he rode his motorcycle, this prior testimony regarding speeding, that he enjoyed speeding or however he testified to at his deposition is admissible to give the jury context as to what was happening that night and how he liked to ride his motorcycle and, you know, just how he liked to ride his motorcycle.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel for plaintiff, you get last word. Go ahead, please.

MR. R. EGLET: I don't think I need one, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. The Court is -- Counsel for plaintiff, I just -- because defendant in their opposition did address the issue about the other riders with plaintiff that night. That's part of the reason why I asked you the question.

MR. R. EGLET: I know. That wasn't part of this motion. I don't know why they did that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. R. EGLET: The motion regarding the other riders that night has already been heard, and that has to do with what happened at Fremont and Las Vegas Boulevard. So I don't know why they included it, you know, and I think in our reply we may have responded to that --

THE COURT: You did.

MR. R. EGLET: -- but it's really not part of this motion.

THE COURT: You did. That's why the Court was asking the question. Because --

MR. R. EGLET: We responded to it because they were -- they're talking about that we've already argued, and you ruled on, which is what happened at Las Vegas Boulevard and Fremont. That wasn't part of this motion. But in their opposition they threw that in there. So we responded to it in our reply, but it's not really part of these two motions.

MS. PARKER: And --

MR. R. EGLET: These two motions are limited to this testimony in his deposition about he had, you know, ridden with the other drivers, not these drivers, other drivers, on some prior occasion, and he didn't really ride with them anymore because they made him nervous. They made him nervous, and because they rode fast and recklessly, and he was afraid of the way they rode, and he didn't want to ride with them.

And then on a separate occasion when he's asked, you know, how fast have you ever gone on this motorcycle, he said, you know, not on the highway, not on a city street, way out on a deserted road, you know, I drove -- I don't remember what it was, 85 or something like that. And so those are -- you know, first of all, the second one is a prior bad act. There's no exception. There's no basis to bring that in.

And then the one with the other motorcyclists, well, they weren't this motorcyclist, and he didn't -- he didn't confirm that he acted that way. He's just saying that's the way they acted.

002334

THE COURT: Okay. This --

MR. R. EGLET: There's no relevance to it, Your Honor, whatsoever, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Here's going to be the Court's ruling with the Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 10, and then I'll go to Motion in Limine Number 11.

Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Number 10, to exclude any reference or arguments to the conduct of other motorcyclists with whom plaintiff rode.

With the clarification that that motion in limine is directed towards conduct that was not the night of the incident, the Court is going to grant it because, realistically, it's irrelevant. I don't see how it would be an exception to -- one of the exceptions with regards to habit.

It doesn't really go to motive. It doesn't go to opportunity because don't know if you're riding on freeway. Yes, you can ride it different -- I'm going to mention speed, but not speed for that night, right. I'm talking about other nights, but it makes a difference where you're riding and what you're doing and where it is, okay. If you're in bumper-to-bumper traffic, even if you're a motorcyclist, you have to do certain things.

If you're out on a road that allows certain other things to happen or you're off roading on a motorcycle that allow certain things to happen, it's all very different. It's not been established to this Court that it has any relevance for you to use a prior bad act, and it doesn't go (indiscernible) to habit-type exceptions. So 10 is granted.

11, to exclude reference to or any argument to any of plaintiff's prior motorcycle riding. Now --

MR. R. EGLET: That's just the -- that's just that one speeding incident we're talking about, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And the Court is --

MR. R. EGLET: And which you just concluded in 10.

THE COURT: The Court is going to grant that for Number 11 for basically the similar reasons, haven't shown that there is anything -- that caveat on 10 and 11 is, of course, subject to opening the door. If the witness -- the plaintiff all of a sudden says I've never sped in my life, I've always gone 30 miles below the speed limit, 20 miles, whatever it is or something like that, right, then there may be an impeachment issue.

If counsel for defendant thinks that there's some type of a impeachment or opening the door, you need to let me know either at bench or outside the presence of the jury before any such impeachment type question gets asked that would be -- I won't say -- that may have overlapped with the Court's ruling today, okay. That's going to be the ruling of the Court.

Counsel for plaintiff, do you need anything more on this one?

MR. R. EGLET: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel for defense, do you need anything more?

MS. PARKER: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You got the opening the door concept?

MS. PARKER: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. And don't worry. At the end of this I was going to get to who's going to prepare the orders, and I'm getting there.

Okay. So we are now at jury questionnaire which is probably -- well, we'll see how far we can get past jury questionnaire.

002337

Jury questionnaire. Jury questionnaire, I have an update to address some of the questions that were asked. Okay. Let me get to my update before I say what the -- okay.

The update with the jury question, yes, it has to be a Wednesday or Thursday, okay, for jurors. Yes, it has to be done by the department if the department agrees to do so.

Yes, there's only been supposedly one civil, possibly a second civil Judge, one civil Judge that did it for two days and then started a trial the next day. One of the ones I'm aware of.

So the question about are you limited to 80 jurors? That answer is no. You can get more, but you can't get them in advance.

So what could happen is in a hypothetical situation, hypothetically, if this Court -- I haven't made a ruling yet. I'm just giving you some background. To the extent it may impact where you're going with your questions on the jury questionnaire and the limited opposition, if a jury questionnaire is to be granted, then jurors would need to come in on Wednesday and/or Thursday.

Panels can be ordered up to 40 at each time, but panels can be ordered with a two-hour break. So meaning could get potentially a panel Wednesday at 10:00, Wednesday at 1:00, and another one Thursday at 10:00 and then start trial on either Friday or no later than the following Monday because you then have to take into account COVID, health and other concerns, right. So you can't start a trial far thereafter.

And then there's a cover sheet that has to be done with Mariah. There has to be ways to get figured out where counsel are going to be -- would have to be responsible for the copying, et cetera, have to determine how that would happen because, realistically, this Court is in trial, and this courtroom is being used every -- this is not a unique day. Let's put it that way, of the courtroom being used all day. So that would have to be figured out.

Those are some details, but no, you cannot call a potential panel in a few weeks in advance as special to a particular case and then start a trial.

So does that clarify the questions you had, Mr. Eglet? And then I'll go to Mr. Aicklen.

MR. R. EGLET: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Aicklen, does that clarify any questions you have?

MR. AICKLEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. So now let's get to the substance of your motion for a jury questionnaire. There was some opposition to some of the questions, okay. Do those oppositions still exists?

MR. AICKLEN: They do. If you read through, and I'm sure you did. I know you do read this stuff. You read through. There's some of them in there that are extremely intrusive and have nothing to do with --

MR. R. EGLET: Are we -- Your Honor, are we going -- I'm a little confused because this is our motion, and we haven't done our --

THE COURT: Right. And you get to go first, Mr. Eglet. My only question was is I was asking defendant, because this was filed a bit ago --

MR. R. EGLET: Okay.

THE COURT: -- whether or not you all had a nice opportunity sometimes to resolve things among yourselves. The Court is not going to start with a whole rigmarole, right, if you all have resolved things. So I need to find out if it needs to be addressed first.

002339

MR. AICKLEN: It needs to be addressed, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Then I'll have counsel for plaintiff to go first, but I'm going to give you an inclination, okay. I'm going to give you -- because impermissible questions, and if I miss a couple, then I'm sure you all will go back through it, but I understood question Number 10 about marital status. There is one view amongst many Judges that if counsel had to fill out the questionnaire, and any question you don't want to fill out on yourself shouldn't be asked as a member of our jury. That's one way I could go, but we'll evaluate that in a second.

002340

Okay. Marital status is a general question that does get asked as long as it says marital status, significant other or partners so that everybody is, quote, politically correct in ensuring that we respect that there's different types of unions, not just a marital reunion -- union, okay, allowed in the State of Nevada, okay. So that one, I'm just giving an inclination -- normally is allowed.

002340

Questions 12 through 18 ask about spouse's education, employment industry. I will tell you that's, realistically on the Court's general questions.

The Court has a general, for those of you who have done trials, Mr. Zarcone, I know you have. Mr. Eglet -- anyway. We have some standard questions, which we can give you a copy of if you really want, and it generally says, you know, spouse, partner, et cetera, and are they employed, retired, you know, and general nature. So as long as it's a general nature, it's fine.

Racial background. Racial background -- hold on a second. And by the way, on the -- what's called the snapshot report, which is what I referenced as the one that jury services does in general, the one that was created for criminal cases, but it's used for civil cases, its informal name is called a snapshot report, okay. So I grabbed a snapshot report that, looking at those questions, to evaluate some of your questions, okay. On that one, it did have, do you have any beliefs, moral, religious, philosophical, et cetera, that you believe would prevent you from serving as a juror.

And have you ever had any prejudiced thoughts about another person based on their racial background, even if those thoughts made you feel uncomfortable or uneasy, and do you believe you have ever been a victim of racial or ethnic prejudice.

And then if your answer to questions 14 and 15, does this affect your ability to be fair and impartial juror -- okay.

When I look at those questions that are going out to any prospective juror who fills out the form online, I have to take that into account, right, for your specific juror questionnaire, meaning if these have been approved by the Chief Judge, everybody -- well, I didn't have a chance. We didn't vote on it and tell the district judge, but anyway, it's been approved through the Eighth Judicial District to go out generally, I have to take those into account when I'm looking at the ones that could come out for a specific case, right, because they've already been approved, then it would be hard.

So realistically, racial background, as long as it has the word optional after that, the Court's general inclination, and this is what I've done in the past, has been it does have to say optional or some language that clearly indicates in bold that the juror need not answer that question, okay.

Then the Court generally finds that one appropriate as long as it is clear that it is optional and that somebody does not need to do it.

The reason why the Court does it that way is there is, more in the criminal context than the civil context, but to make sure we have a fair population of our jurors, right, and you have the appropriate diversity, and clearly that normally comes up in criminal, not civil; however, it could potentially come up in a Batson, J.E.B. Alabama, et cetera. So that information generally would be somewhat allowed; however, balancing the privacy rights in the interest of the members of our jury, I say that that is an optional one because I feel that takes into account and balances -- does really the proper balance.

Okay. So that's the Court -- these are inclinations. You get to argue them.

27 and 28 regard jurors' family with special training or schooling in traffic safety or driving a commercial vehicles.

That's a question mark one, realistically because, since this is a motorcycle case, and this is kind of done generally on driving safety or commercial vehicles, I really am going to let you argue that one. I don't really have an inclination.

Question 36, involvement in insurance is improperly invasive. Really, the Court's viewpoint on that one is that if it complies with Silver State, it's allowed, right, as long as it's phrased in a manner that complies with Silver State. Silver State, the Supreme Court tells us what we can do, right.

32, ask jurors injuries and invasive. There, once again, the Court generally, as long as it's phrased and it has to have similar bold language on optional, need not answer it because you have to balance somebody's right to medical privacy or their own personal aspect because this could cover both mental and physical, and so some people may not want to answer it. Some people may want to answer it, and the reason why I give that background is because sometimes we get reasons why people don't want to serve on a jury is they assert that they have anxiety, and they want to say it in open court, okay, or they give some other reasons.

So that one falls within the needing to balance the juror's right to privacy with the right to counsel to know if there is a potential injury. Because, A, if that injury is similar to what the plaintiff has or one of them, that may be a factor that allows you for your two basis for your well-reasoned peremptory challenges, right. Or two, it may also go to whether you think someone is going to be fair and impartial because if they have had significant injuries, one view -- one side may view it as good or bad for their particular case, and so generally allowed as long as it has the optional language.

34, 35, too general and should be explored in voir dire. That's a question mark. I'd have to hear a little bit more about that.

36, 37 is similar, the optional, right. Some people may or may not wish to. Because realistically, the Court does generally ask because I should. I have -- I ask affirmatively if anybody is requesting any reasonable accommodations. People don't need to disclose a disability in open court; however, many people choose to do so, and they wish to disclose that they have something because they want to be accommodated, such as if we have people who have -- need accommodations to get up every half hour. We have footstools. We have hearing assistive devices, et cetera.

So to the extent that that has optional language that allows a person to determine whether they wish or do not wish to answer said question, really the Court sees it as similar to being in the voir dire process because once again, that balances the privacy interests. Because, remember, jury questionnaires could potentially become public. But if you make it optional, then somebody isn't having to disclose either a medical condition, a mental condition or a disability, and so you're balancing interests in general, and the Court really would have to hear the position on the preconditioning to get a further flex. I'm really just giving you some inclinations here.

65 and 66, I really wasn't sure on 65 and 66 because I see that a lot. That's just really people's views on counsels one way or another. If somebody is -- because it's the kind of question that normally gets us generally in voir dire, you know what I mean, do you have any prejudice against or either plaintiff attorneys or defense attorneys. It kind of goes with the attorney advertising question. So I'd have to hear that out a little bit more to see the reasonings for that.

And then there's a general concept of 60 through 66 and 72 asked about pain and suffering and lawsuits and will confuse the jurors and should be explored in voir dire.

I really see this falling similar to the optional language because there really is -- and it depends on how this is actually phrased. Because if they have a preconceived cap, purposely permissible to ask them, but if this is going in to requiring them to explain about their own potential pain and suffering, et cetera and that this would also need to have a caveat that they would not need to disclose anything that's subject to any confidentiality agreement, because if they had been in their own prior litigation, have any confidentiality agreements, okay. So that one I need to hear a little bit more, but that's usually what comes up with that one.

68, 70, seeks information on high verdicts and suggests this could be a multimillion dollar case. You cite Trautman. There's other cases that come up with regards to kind of dealing with the caps issue. That one we'll have to hear a little bit more on.

002346

So that's the Court's quick inclination on those jury questions.

Let's walk through, Counsel for plaintiff. You get to go first.

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, did you want me just to address the -- questions that counsel objected to, or do you want me to give the argument about why we think the jury questionnaire is appropriate here? Because they completely objected to a questionnaire, period.

THE COURT: Well, I saw it both -- it's interesting because it says limited objection, and then part of it it says globally.

MR. R. EGLET: I know, but --

THE COURT: And then --

MR. R. EGLET: They may have said limited, but the way I read it is they were objecting to a jury questionnaire at all, and then they objected to specific questions. Well, I -- I can go ahead and give my argument, my whole argument because I suspect that counsel is going to get up and argue that there should be no jury questionnaire at all. So I'd like to give it.

002347

THE COURT: Sure. You each are going to get 10 minutes on your arguments because this Court does need to leave at 4:00 o'clock.

MR. R. EGLET: Okay. All right. I can't -- I can't do this in 10 minutes, Your Honor, and address the specific questions as well.

And I would -- I would ask the Court, is the Court aware that the jury questionnaire with these questions was attached, and I heard the Court say several times that you -- well, it depends on how exactly it reads. Well, the jury questionnaire is attached.

THE COURT: Right. That's --

MR. R. EGLET: It's --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. R. EGLET: It's almost identical to the Jimmy John's jury questionnaire.

THE COURT: I have the 23-page questionnaire.

MR. R. EGLET: Quite frankly --

THE COURT: The reason why I say that is because, once again, between the time people submit things and the time that sometimes we have hearings, people have ideas that, A, they want to edit it; or B, there's been discussion among various counsel that they want to kind of modify it, change it, et cetera. So that's the reason why the Court gives a more generic, global viewpoint of how questions are asked rather than going to the something specific because I don't want to make an advance ruling on the specific. I kind of give the general to give you all an idea on the inclination on the types of questions.

Go ahead, Counsel. If you want -- if you want to address it now, fine.

I will tell you the Court's general inclination is if you all can find a way that you're going to take care of getting this juror questionnaire done, right, in the time of -- so you're paying for it. You're paying for the photocopies. You're going to ensure that you have somebody here, if you want one side from each side mutually, right, to oversee or something, then we can make it work.

In general because the nature of this type of case, with the breadth and depth and length of a case, the snapshot report I don't think fully covers some of the things that are going to be most important for you all: A, a time qualifier; B, to ensure that you have certain people.

C, my other caveat is jury questionnaires are only allowed if they're going to minimize voir dire. If you all are going to ask me for several days of voir dire and a jury questionnaire, then I'm going to have to respond why do you need a jury questionnaire if it's just going to expand the voir dire process; right? Because the jury questionnaire is supposed to be done in tandem with the voir dire process to you expedite, right, and allow parties to make well-reasoned determinations to exercise their peremptory challenges and to ensure you get a fair and impartial jury.

MR. R. EGLET: Well, I guess I'm -- if the Court is insistent on the 10 minute --

THE COURT: I have to. I have to leave at 4:00 o'clock. So it's either I stop now or stop at 4:00.

MR. R. EGLET: Okay. I get it, Judge.

So I guess my inclination would be then to allow Mr.-- opposing counsel, I'm presuming it's Mr. Aicklen, is trial counsel in the case, allow me and him to have a meet and confer and -- on the questions, taking the guidance the Court gave us today and then come back at the Court's next available date if at that -- you know, and I've heard -- and I think Mr. Aicklen and I both heard the Court's inclination on because the nature of this case you're more inclined to give a jury questionnaire.

But, you know, the -- so the problem is outlined in our motion is why we want one. So I don't need to put too much more into that.

But I think more efficiently as opposed to us, like, trying to rush through this in 20 minutes, Judge, is allow us to have a meet and confer to see what we can actually agree on. Because all they have, all they've seen is the questionnaire we sent. I haven't seen any proposals back to them, and Mr. Aicklen and I, I think at least, if there is going to be a jury questionnaire, can probably agree on most of the questions. There's still going to be some I'm sure we're going to disagree on, and we can just come back and find out which questions those are and just address those questions to the Court and let the Court rule at that time. I think that's a more efficient use of everybody's time here.

THE COURT: Mr. Aicklen, do you agree or disagree or whoever's taking it on behalf of defendants?

MR. AICKLEN: Well, I think if you are of a mind to give it and you think that it needs more than just the snapshot report, then I agree that counsel and I should talk and see if we can't work out some of those particular questions.

But then I also want to know too, what you're saying then is we'll have a Wednesday -- I'm sorry, yeah, Wednesday Thursday, and that's jury selection; right? We're going to pick a jury Wednesday Thursday.

THE COURT: Oh, no. No. No.

MR. AICKLEN: And then Friday we're starting trial?

THE COURT: Oh, no. Okay. Let me clarify that. Let's break this down into two prongs.

So it seems like the parties agree that since you need to come back to finish off your motions in limine anyway, we stop here for today after I answer counsel for defense's question, and you speak among yourselves about whether, A, you're going to agree on a jury questionnaire; and B, scope of it if you are going to agree, and I'm not precluding you from arguing it.

The reason why the Court tried to give you an inclination is, realistically, I've done enough of these bigger cases, right, okay. Some of your largest issues are if you were to bring in jurors in a couple of different panels, and as soon as you say --

Are you still at six weeks -- six weeks for this trial?

MR. R. EGLET: Yeah. We're at six weeks, Your Honor, but again that six weeks includes my estimated time for jury selection.

THE COURT: Which is how long?

MR. R. EGLET: My estimated time, if we have a jury questionnaire, my estimated time for jury selection is a week.

MR. AICKLEN: Yeah, see that doesn't do us any good, seven days to pick a jury? After having a questionnaire? I think that goes into my argument of why that's indoctrination. If --

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, it's not indoctrination --

MR. AICKLEN: Can I --

MR. R. EGLET: -- and if you'll recall the Jimmy John's case, the reason it takes so long in these -- every motorcycle case I've done -- I've done a number of them, it takes this long because there are dozens and dozens and dozens of people who are excused for cause because of their views one way or the other about the motorcycle drivers and then people who ride motorcycles, their views about how other people treat motorcycles, and they are strong biases that clearly will affect the trial. I think you remember that from Jimmy John's. It's there, the Jimmy John's case, and I've had this in virtually every single motorcycle case I've done.

You cannot -- and if the Court's inclination or desire, which is the Court's obligation is to get a fair and impartial jury and make sure there's no one on there who -- who is fair and impartial, it's going to take that long in this case. I know it is. I've done this over and over again. It's going to take that long, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay --

MR. R. EGLET: But I included that. That's included in the six weeks. It's not like it's six weeks of trial and then plus that time for jury selection. That's included in that.

THE COURT: Okay. Some of the questions in the 40s, I didn't remember how much range it was, was also about motorcycles.

Okay. Let me answer Mr. Aicklen's question, and then the reasoning.

002353

Regardless if it was a month trial or a six-week trial, usually one of the largest challenges, particularly now, right, with the various health situations, is having jurors be able to sit for that period of time, right, because being in a -- people have different perceptions, and health issues happen, right. So that means, having the time qualifier aspect, getting taken care of as much in advance as possible usually works to everyone's best interest, right? Because you don't bring in people, and then guess what, you're spending -- you sit X number of people in the box, and you find out a whole bunch of other people have time qualifier issues, and a jury questionnaire does assist with the time qualifier issues.

I mean, when I did the CD case, well, a very different example is a year and a half, right, for Queens Ridge Towers. We sent out 10,000 ability to serve questionnaires because it made no sense to bring in members of our community, right, that weren't going to be able to sit a year and a half, and I'm giving you a very broad different example. Of course, this is a lot less.

Generally -- I mean, I normally don't do juror questionnaires in a couple week trials because it's a balance of having the members of our community come in, extra time, right, et cetera, balancing with how the cases are.

The cases, when they're around a month, six weeks kind of is in that questionable aspect because of the time qualifier component.

002354

Since post-COVID, knowing what many of my colleagues have experienced, et cetera, that really part of the issue -- and actually, like I said, I was on jury duty last September. So I got to see how many people actually showed up -- that's part of the issue of getting that time qualifier, okay. Realistically, if it meets parties' interest to get some of the most likely common cause challenges taken care of by stipulation for jury questionnaires, usually counsel find that very helpful.

002354

I fully appreciate that there is a very big difference in opinion on different types of questions other than the two this Court just said can appear on jury questionnaires, okay.

I fully appreciate people have very different views, and I don't have a view on that, okay. The parties usually come to an agreement on a jury questionnaire. Both sides have ones that they want.

Having, because you've got multiple law firms in this case, okay, and the larger law firms and law firms that have done a large breadth and depth of type of cases, a jury questionnaire is helpful usually in that as well, so that you don't have -- we get a large number of, you know what I mean, who know the attorneys, right, or have worked with the firm or have worked against the firm, okay. So that -- I think we do that in CD and some other ones, okay. That seems to make sense because that's another factor that can take a significant amount of time, and you can lose a lot of jurors on it, right.

We do it also with a lot of the gaming properties, right, because, if you're going to be having a large case against one of the gaming properties -- you all have been -- your firms have been involved in that -- you might as well find out if people work with those gaming properties, right, because you're going to excuse them for cause oftentimes as well.

So those are some of the factors just from a generic standpoint that this Court looks at for jury questionnaires, okay.

The motorcycle issue, realistically, I look more on the breadth and nature. This is the type of case you all have spent a significant amount of time on motion practice, right, number of motions in limine. I look at so far what you done so far for witness lists, et cetera. It looks to me like you have a lot of things that extensively are being done. That's the type of case that generally is ripe for a juror questionnaire if it is minimizing the time for voir dire, okay, and that's my caveat.

It's not a -- if it's -- it's not the background to give more voir dire questions, okay, or if you get certain information you get more voir dire questions. It's really to be efficient and appropriate for members of our community. Then it would be easier for them to spend a couple hours filling out a juror questionnaire than being here a couple more days for voir dire.

I think that's a fair balance, particularly in these COVID times when you have to have people in a, you know what I mean, in a contained area where we have certain air and certain other things. You see we still have the other, every other. Many courtrooms don't. We're still evaluating, but so far we've done this because jurors have liked having every other seat. It gives them a sense of comfort.

So I have not made any -- I don't have any predisposition to it. I'm just, historically, I've given you some of the reasons on the type of cases that we usually have done it and it have been helpful and usually have not gotten a strong objection from one side or the other on a juror questionnaire. Usually it's the type of questions that get asked and the breadth and depth of the questions that get asked because there's oftentimes a certain number of questions that one side might have one viewpoint on, and another side might have another viewpoint on. Does that --

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor, can I ask you a question?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. R. EGLET: So I'm trying to -- I'm trying to kind of follow what you're saying. It sounds like to me you are -- and I was going to suggest this. I just didn't know if there was a mechanism for it under the situation we're operating on now because I know that we had this discussion in open court months ago about the opiates trials going next year, that we're going to have to have a two-step process for the questionnaire, initial questionnaire just to time qualify the panel and, you know, get rid of people that have obvious cause issues.

For example, we talked about I think, you know, people who have had kids who have died of opiates, you know, prescription opioid overdoses or, you know, things like that, or maybe people who work for opiate pharmaceutical companies. And then we would -- we would get that done, and then we would have who was left in the panel then fill out the questionnaire that's the more substantive stuff that we need for voir dire.

I thought what I heard you saying here was some process for that in this case. Maybe that can be done.

THE COURT: No. No. No. No.

MR. R. EGLET: But I didn't understand how that could be done under the current --

THE COURT: No, no. I wasn't --

MR. R. EGLET: -- mechanisms that --

THE COURT: I was trying to give an example of what we did in a -- I was trying to give an example of kinds of cases that we've used a jury questionnaire. I gave an example for Queens Ridge on that a component for a jury questionnaire, one of the most compelling things for this Court really is the time qualifier because that's two everyone's benefit, right.

MR. R. EGLET: Right, Your Honor.

THE COURT: If people can't be at your entire case, wouldn't you want to know it sooner rather than later, okay, rather then find out how my guess what, all of a sudden you have issues with people saying they can't serve the entire time.

I was not suggesting a two-pronged process here. Remember, the conversation on the opioid case, and I'm not going to have anything further because I do not have everyone in that case present here remotely or in person, but that conversation took place before there was a presentation on what is going to be the go-forward process of jury questionnaires, okay. So remember --

MR. R. EGLET: Understood.

THE COURT: Something I may have said in 2019, under the 2019 rules may not be today, right. Something --

MR. R. EGLET: Well, this was --

THE COURT: -- we've had a lot of administrative orders --

MR. R. EGLET: Well, this is 2021, but --

THE COURT: Right. But --

MR. R. EGLET: -- you didn't have the case in 2019, but I understand.

THE COURT: Well, even -- I was going to say even in 2021 we didn't have this -- jury services were still handling juror questionnaires potentially. The clear directive that a department is going to have to do that came down within to this -- don't hold me to it, within the last couple of months is my recollection, okay.

MR. R. EGLET: All right.

THE COURT: So that is a very different change that makes a difference. Because if I'm having sitting here and using the courtroom for you all for two days, that means every other case on my docket can't be in here getting theirs done, right. That means it impacts hundreds of other cases, right, with all the rulings and all the other aspects. That's a new factor a Court has to balance, okay.

Whether or not the parties are willing to take on the copying and all the other requirements that happened with a jury questionnaire is a factor that used to not have to happen. It used to be a very really nice and easy process, right. I could approve something. You all send it to jury services. It magically appeared. I'm being somewhat euphemistic, right, you know what I mean. I signed my name to the front page, and voilà, I got a letter usually that stipulated to certain people, and then we addressed the other people, okay.

That's not the way the process is now. Whether the process will change when we get a new Chief Judge starting July 1, I do not know.

Once again, I don't have a crystal ball. I'd love to have one, okay, if they really worked, but I don't have one. So I can only tell you what I know today.

002360

Now, if an administrative order is being typed up while I'm talking to you, I have no idea, okay. I literally was in the middle of doing a trial, and then all of a sudden we had the five-day trial rule, okay. So guess what. Fifteen minutes after I spoke and we are prepping for trial, I had to tell that trial, sorry, you're not going because we have a five-day trial rule. So welcome to my world.

I can give you the best information that I have as timely as I have it, but I'm not going to pretend that I know the future because I don't.

Realistically, I was not saying a two-pronged process for a jury questionnaire. I was trying to give an example. I was trying to give some examples on when this Court has granted jury questionnaires in the past and some of the key points, realistically is when you have multiple firms because it allows the firms -- it's efficient and effective so that you have members of the community, if we have large employers is another one.

That doesn't really apply here, but when you have large employers, sometimes -- oftentimes people will request a jury questionnaire because if we've got someone like -- I'll say MGM, although now it's got a variety of different names, right, whether you consider the property holder -- or anyway. But you know what I mean, thousands and thousands of employees. People sometimes want questionnaires because they don't want to have everyone come in here, and then guess what, there's, particularly on the nature of the case, you know what I mean. It depends on if it's a slip and fall versus it's a dispute over stock, et cetera. Okay. Once again, factors matter.

This Court is open to make things work in the best interest of all parties, not to the advantage of one party or another but to the best interests of all parties, taking fully into account the needs of our community.

So I don't have a pro or a negative against juror questionnaires. It just has to work, and it has to be appropriate in a particular case.

Does that kind of answer your question, both of you all?

MR. R. EGLET: It does, Your Honor, and I guess now we're looking at maybe, instead of 80, maybe 160, but I am --

THE COURT: 160 people will be very challenging, Counsel. Counsel, a hundred. Hundred I can probably get you. Please don't ask me for 160.

MR. R. EGLET: Well, I thought you said 40. You might do 40 in the morning on Wednesday, 40 in the afternoon, 40 in the morning on Thursday, 40 in the afternoon. Am I not understanding on the questionnaire?

002362

THE COURT: I actually said 40 and 40 on the Wednesday and then only -- well, I said -- I gave a hypothetical hundred example. So it would have been -- whether 40 and 40 on Wednesday and then 20 on Thursday.

MR. R. EGLET: Oh.

THE COURT: The maximum that gets you, it would be very hard to be to do another 40 on a Thursday afternoon. And realistically, because no later than like the Thursday afternoon is when you're going to want to start your voir dire process. Because once again, I'm going to have to balance. When I'm saying starting trial, we could start a trial, with depending on how long you need for voir dire. The voir dire process --

MR. R. EGLET: Were not going to be able to get --

THE COURT: -- can start immediately, or the voir dire process wouldn't be -- the voir dire process couldn't start any later than the Monday after the jurors had filled out the questionnaire. I was trying to take into account --

MR. R. EGLET: Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- that it might take you all a day to get the questionnaires copied if you needed to do so, right. Some trials have gone immediately into it. They filled out the questionnaires. They get it copied. Boom, they're starting the voir dire questioning, whatever is left that afternoon or the following morning. I'm not sure what you all are wanting to do. I was trying to give a lot of different options so that you all could can consider that.

Go ahead.

MR. R. EGLET: Well, I'm just -- I'm just kind of trying to ferret out some of the concerns because I will tell you right now I know for a fact with the nature of this case, with the length of this case, particularly with the fact that, you know, with COVID that's happened, and there are a lot of people, mostly potential jurors, who are not in the best financial situation anymore, can't afford to miss any work because, I mean, knowing what the price of milk is and bread now and eggs, but it's off the charts. We're going to lose 40 percent of that panel based on hardships, based on hardships.

And that's -- there's no way with the number of cause challenges that will be granted in this type of case, these motorcycle cases, we can't seat a jury. We're not going to have enough to seat a jury. You've got -- you've got each side is -- you're going to at least have to have six alternates. And quite frankly, because of COVID, you know, six would be normal if it's a six-week trial, an alternate for each week, but with COVID and everything, I think we probably need 10 alternates. That's 18 jurors. That's seven peremptory challenges per side. That's 14 peremptory challenges, and then with the cause challenges, we can't -- there's no way in this particular case we can sit a jury with only a panel of a hundred to start.

002364

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. R. EGLET: It's impossible. It will never happen. We'll end up in a mistrial. We will run out of jurors.

THE COURT: I --

MR. R. EGLET: And I don't want to be in a situation where the Court -- and I'm not saying that Your Honor would do this in any way shape or form, but I don't want to have anybody feel pressure that, well, we can't grant a cause motion here because we may run out of jurors if we do that. And that's --

THE COURT: I will tell you Judge Allf just did a four-week trial, didn't really have an issue to my knowledge. I understand Judge Jones is in the middle of a six or seven-week trial. Didn't have an issue.

The largest trial we've done is about three weeks-ish. We didn't really -- well, the only issue we had, we still had enough people, and that was because the attorneys knew a person had a specific conflict, and then they went over a few days knowing that the person had to not be here. So guess what. You pick someone who specifically tells you that they have a conflict, you know, don't pick people that don't have conflicts, then that's an attorney issue, that's not -- but I'm, you know what I mean. That's not a juror issue. That's just if somebody says they have to be gone, and you run over your case more than the time, more than a few days, then that's, you know. They told you. We had extra jurors on that case. So it was not an issue of running out of potential venire panel.

That being said, it's 4:00 o'clock. I do need -- in fairness, I told everyone we would be out of here by 4:00 o'clock. So I need to --

MR. R. EGLET: Understood, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- to keep that.

MR. R. EGLET: All right. Thank you.

THE COURT: So we will find you another day. We're just going to have to look and see what we have.

I estimate -- we're just going to have to get you another day, and I'm going to have to talk with Tracy to see where we can find some time. We're trying to see if one of our jury trials potentially goes to overflow so that we can free up some time for this case as well as some of my business court bench trial cases that I'm in the midst of.

So we should know that hopefully tomorrow, and I will get back to you to get you a new date.

Realize you're not going before the end of July, okay. That's realistically. So you all are going to have to provide us some general -- you're on this current stack. I can put you towards the end of the stack, but I do have to do the 2015 business court case.

And there's a second business court case that has precedence that I have to take care of because business court bench trials cannot go to overflow under our current rules, and business courts do have priority, and I have 2015, obviously is going to have priority, and given -- so. I've got to get that case done, which means probably not until the end of July.

If it's not the end of July, I've got some time probably August-ish that I could fill in six weeks. If not, it's probably November because September I've got back-to-back med mals that I have to do.

Welcome to my world.

So figure out what you all have from a time frame because I know we moved this on some people's schedules, and you guys have other things that may have, you know, priorities on your Rule 41 cases. So when you talk, please also talk about trial time frames and when you're going to have that six weeks so we can get you take care of, right. Okay. Thank you so very much.

MR. R. EGLET: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Madam Court Recorder, we can go off the record. Appreciate it. Thank you.

(Proceedings concluded at 4:02 p.m.)

ORDER DENYING WITHOUT PREJUDICE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 9 TO EXCLUDE THE SURVEILLANCE VIDEO OF THE SUBJECT COLLISION AND TO ADMIT BLACK AND WHITE STILL FRAME SHOTS WITH BLURRED LIGHTS

Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 9 to Exclude the Surveillance Video of the Subject Collision and to Admit Black and White Still Frame Shots with Blurred Lights came before the Honorable Joanna S. Miller, Esq. of EGLET ADAMS, and William W. McGaha, Esq. of SCHUETZ & MCGAHA,

Case Number: A-18-774286-C

P.C., on behalf of Plaintiff ETHAN FERREE via BlueJeans remote teleconferencing; and by Josh Cole Aicklen, Esq. and Sharon A. Parker, Esq. of LEWIS BRISBOIS BISGAARD & SMITH LLP, Joel D. The Court, having reviewed the moving papers and pleadings on file herein, hearing oral argument, being fully advised in the premises, and for good cause appearing, hereby finds as follows:

1) The surveillance video and color of the still frame shots will assist the jury in understanding the circumstances at the time of the collision;
2) The surveillance video and color of the still frame shots may be relevant during direct examination and cross-examination; and
3) Plaintiff may raise the issues outlined in Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 9 again either before or during trial.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 9 to Exclude the Surveillance Video of the Subject Collision and to Admit Black and White Still Frame Shots with Blurred Lights is DENIED without prejudice.

DEPT. NO. XXXI

ORDER DENYING WITHOUT PREJUDICE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 5 TO EXCLUDE ANY ARGUMENT, OPINIONS, OR TESTIMONY AS TO THE LOCATION OF THE VEHICLES IN RELATION TO THE TRAFFIC SIGNAL SEQUENCE

Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 5 to Exclude Any Argument, Opinions, or Testimony as to the Location of the Vehicles in Relation to the Traffic Signal Sequence came before the Honorable Joanna S. Kishner, Department 31, Eighth Judicial District Court, for oral argument on May 11, 2022 at 8:30 a.m. Appearances were made by Robert T. Eglet, Esq. and Danielle C. Miller, Esq. of EGLET ADAMS, and William W. McGaha, Esq. of SCHUETZ & MCGAHA,

P.C., on behalf of Plaintiff ETHAN FERREE via BlueJeans remote teleconferencing; and by Josh Cole Aicklen, Esq. and Sharon A. Parker, Esq. of LEWIS BRISBOIS BISGAARD & SMITH LLP, Joel D. Henriod, Esq. and John E. Bragonje, Esq. of LEWIS ROCA ROTHGERBER CHRISTIE LLP, and Justin J. Zarcone, Esq. of WINNER BOOZE & ZARCONE, on behalf of Defendants DEBBRAH YOCOM and HOWARD STARK, LLC. d/b/a SIN CITY PARTY BUSES in person.

The Court, having reviewed the moving papers and pleadings on file herein, hearing oral argument, being fully advised in the premises, and for good cause appearing, hereby finds as follows:

1) The location of the vehicles in relation to the traffic signal sequence is relevant to the affirmative defense of comparative negligence;
2) Pursuant to NRS 484B.253, a left-turning driver must consider the traffic signal sequence when determining whether oncoming traffic is so close to the intersection as to constitute an immediate hazard; and
3) The instant ruling shall not change any prior rulings made by this Court.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 5 to Exclude Any Argument, Opinions, or Testimony as to the Location of the Vehicles in Relation to the Traffic Signal Sequence is DENIED without prejudice.

CASE NO. A-18-774286-C
DEPT. NO. XXXI

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 4 TO EXCLUDE REFERENCE OR ARGUMENT REGARDING THE SPEED LIMIT ON LAS VEGAS BOULEVARD

Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 4 to Exclude Reference or Argument Regarding the Speed Limit on Las Vegas Boulevard came before the Honorable Joanna S. Kishner, Department 31, Eighth Judicial District Court, for oral argument on May 11, 2022 at 8:30 a.m. Appearances were made by Robert T. Eglet, Esq. and Danielle C. Miller, Esq. of EGLET ADAMS, and William W. McGaha, Esq. of SCHUETZ & MCGAHA, P.C., on behalf of Plaintiff ETHAN FERREE via BlueJeans remote teleconferencing; and by Josh Cole Aicklen, Esq. and Sharon A. Parker, Esq. of LEWIS BRISBOIS BISGAARD & SMITH LLP, Joel D. Henriod, Esq. and John E. Bragonje, Esq. of LEWIS ROCA ROTHGERBER CHRISTIE LLP, and Justin J. Zarcone, Esq. of WINNER BOOZE & ZARCONE, on behalf of Defendants DEBBRAH YOCOM and HOWARD STARK, LLC. d/b/a SIN CITY PARTY BUSES in person.

The Court, having reviewed the moving papers and pleadings on file herein, hearing oral argument, being fully advised in the premises, and for good cause appearing, hereby finds as follows:

1) The issue is in this case is whether Defendant Yocom failed to yield Plaintiff's right-of-way when she turned left, not whether Plaintiff was speeding;
2) The Court does not see how the speed limit on Las Vegas Boulevard had any impact on Defendant Yocom's decision as to whether she could make her left turn safely; and
3) The Court does not see how the speed limit on Las Vegas Boulevard is relevant based on the operative Complaint and the current allegations in this case.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 4 to Exclude Reference or Argument Regarding the Speed Limit on Las Vegas Boulevard is GRANTED.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 4 to Exclude Reference or Argument Regarding the Speed Limit on Las Vegas Boulevard is GRANTED.
